...5c U.S. gas tax planned

From Herald News Services

President Carter's master plan for energy conservation proposes stiff taxes on gasoline consumers, auto makers and oil companies, according to a draft obtained and summarized Wednesday.

According to a Wall Street Journal report, the key proposals include steadily rising taxes on gasoline at the pump — starting with a 5-cent a gallon tax in 1979 — plus taxes on auto makers that produce gas-guzzling models and wellhead taxes on domestic oil production.

White House Press Sec. Jody Powell said it is all but certain Carter will hold his second televised "fireside chat" Monday evening to discuss "the shape" of what is expected to be a controversial energy conservation package.

POWELL SAID the aim would be to prepare the public for the proposals by spelling out the energy problems that must be faced. "The situation is worse than is generally recognized," he said.

He said the plan would involve some immediate sacrifice on the part of consumers.

Carter formally will present the 120-page plan to a joint session of Congress Wednesday evening.

"It's no secret, it's going to be tough," said James Bishop, spokesman for presidential energy adviser James Schlesinger. "It will include some 30 to 35 proposals.

"The emphasis will be on the automobile, not the driver," Bishop said, adding that conservation goals, covering a span of two to eight years, will include a drive to reduce gasoline consumption by four million barrels a day.

HE SAID FINAL decisions on the package would be made this weekend.

The Journal said Wednesday it had obtained a copy of the latest energy policy draft.

The Journal also said the draft proposes increases in natural gas price ceilings.

The Journal said the draft it obtained still could be revised before Carter makes his expected pitch to the public Monday. But it said key features of the current draft are:

• Gas pump taxes: some time after January, 1979, addition of a 5 cent a

...1c saving on self-serve

A Herald staff report

Illinois motorists beginning May 1 will be able to pump their own gasoline because of Gov. James R. Thompson's order Wednesday changing state fire laws governing self-service gas stations.

Although Thompson said he believes the change could mean a 1 cent savings a gallon to the consumer, and additional revenue for the state, Northwest suburban station operators predict little, if any savings, for the public and fear the action will create safety problems.

Thompson said his decision came after a survey of self-service gas laws in the 47 states that now allow motorists to fill up their own gas tanks.

THE GOVERNOR also said the state may receive an additional $4 to $6 million in revenue because motorists who live near state borders will start buying their gasoline in Illinois. All states bordering Illinois permit self-service operations.

Thompson and his staff, who are proclaiming the announcement a "consumer-oriented" move, appear to be the only ones immediately happy.

Dale Jewel of Palatine who has pumped gas through all kinds of weather for eight years and carried on a lengthy fight with Standard Oil because the giant company wanted to make his station a "gas and go" operation, does not like the development.

"I though it was coming, the oil companies are pushing for it so they could develop pumper stations," he said.

Other gas station operators said they already are selling gas for little more than they pay the suppliers and that self-service will produce little benefit for the consumer.

CARL DICARO, owner of a Mobil Station at 2020 E. Euclid Ave., Mount Prospect, predicted the move could force an increase in the cost of gas pumped by an attendant.

Dicaro and other operators also expressed concern about safety.

"You know who will start pumping gas with a cigaret in their hand," he said.

Safety also was an issue for James Brawar, administrator of the Illinois Service Stations Operators Assn.

He called for a mandatory auto safety inspection program with the self-servict regulations. He said 38 other states have the same regulation. State officials do not plan to link the two.

ROBERT JACOBS, executive director of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Assn., said the move will force thousands of gas station employes out of work.

He said the decision was an outrageous conflict of interest for Thompson because the governor received campaign contributions from oil companies.

A key administration figure labeled as nonsense charges the move will help "big oil." He said the oil com-

...State gas tax hike considered

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Gov. James R. Thompson Wednesday said he will decide by the end of the current legislative session in early June whether he will seek a gasoline tax increase.

In his budget address a month ago, Thompson said he might propose an increase in the 7½ per cent state gas tax. He said a tax might be needed because the state road fund, which is supported by the tax, is depleted and because roads are deteriorating.

"There comes a point," Thompson said during a TV taping session in Springfield Wednesday, "where you say, OK, I've given the public reaction enough time, here are the pros and cons, here is what the public thinks.

"And if I still feel strongly about the need for additional revenue and I think I can persuade the legislature to pass a gas tax, then I'll take a position."

He said his announcement will come "some time in late May or early June, after we've had a chance to assess the impact of whatever proposal President Carter is going to put before the Congress and after we've had a chance to assess congressional reaction."

Thompson plans to visit the White House today for a briefing on the President's energy program, which will be presented publicly Wednesday.

Police building plan showy: panel

Preliminary plans for a 40,000-square-foot police building, estimated to cost $2.9 million, Wednesday night were called too expensive and "showy" by a special committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board.

The committee ordered the village administration and architects for the project to study ways of reducing the size and cost of the proposed building, which would house the Arlington Heights Police Dept. and headquarters for the fire department.

The proposed site for the building is immediately east of the municipal building on Sigwalt Street.

VILLAGE MGR. L. A. Hanson has proposed paying for the building with federal revenue-sharing funds, but Village Trustee Frank Palmatier questioned whether Arlington Heights will receive enough through the federal aid program before it ends in four years to pay for the building.

"If we put a $3 million price tag on it, this building will be four years down the pike. I think the administration needs to get its act together in refinement of this budget," Palmatier said.

He also questioned the design of the building, which calls for a windowed area extending through the center of the building, designed to give an atrium effect.

THE PLANS, PRESENTED by the Loebl, Schlossman & Hackl firm of Chicago, also call for a main entrance way composed entirely of transparent glass.

"We're not trying to make a show place. This shows no useful purpose and will give us a bad name as far as the taxpayers are concerned," Palmatier said.

The architect of the building, John Schlossman, said the glass atrium and entrance would give the building more "character and atmosphere."

"We've designed more than a bare bones, low-cost durable building. It's a building for people. Not just something with four walls," Schlossman said.

VILLAGE TRUSTEE Robert Miller offered some support for the esthetics of the building's design.

"This community has always built the best version of things you don't see, such as the water system. I don't see why we should feel ashamed if people won't be walking into a sterile building. We can take pride in our image," Miller said.

Miller, agreed, however, with Palmatier that the architects should consider restructuring the building so both levels cover about the same amount of area. As proposed y Schlossmun, the main level covers 13,000 square feet and the upper level covers 8,900 square feet, allowing room for expansion.

Schlossman said such restructuring would mean starting a new study of the plan.

"I don't really think you would save that much money by restructuring. I wouldn't try exchanging, I'd try to eliminate where you could," he said.

The committee will meet again next Wednesday.

ERA rejected by Florida Senate

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — The Florida Senate, despite the lobbying of President Carter and Vice President Mondale, rejected the Equal Rights Amendment Wednesday, stifling the ERA for two years and casting doubt that the proposal will become the Constitution's 27th Amendment.

The 21-19 Senate vote was the second Southern setback the amendment has suffered this year, and proponents conceded they have no prospect of adding a state to the current list of 35 until North Carolina, which turned down the ERA this year, reconvenes its legislature in early 1979. By then, time will be critically short for the ERA, which has seven years from its March 22, 1972, passage by Congress in which to win 38 states.

"ERA IS GOING to be ratified," pleaded Sen. Lori Wilson, a Cocoa Beach independent who has futilly sponsored the amendment since 1973. "So let's — just one time — let it be because of the South, not in spite of us."

Gov. Reubin Askew called it a "deep disappointment." Askew, like Carter and Mondale, personally had contacted wavering Senators with a plea to send the ERA to the House, where it was assured passage by a comfortable margin.

"Women have waited far too long for the equality which is rightfully theirs," he said. "And they must continue to wait."

Sen. Alan Trask of Fort Meade, formerly a pro-ERA Democrat who was swayed by the "gay rights" controversy in Miami, read Bible verses expressing divine condemnation of homosexuality.

"WE MUST NEVER pass a law that is contrary to the teachings of God," Trask said.

Although the ERA is pending in the South Carolina Senate, proponents have no hope of getting it ratified by that state. Georgia shelved it in committee this year before the North Carolina defeat, and it also has been killed by Nevada, Virginia, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Indiana is the only state ratifying the ERA this year.

Prospects for 1979 appear doubtful for ERA supporters, because some state legislatures in nonratifying states do not convene until after the March 22 expiration of the seven-year limit.

Gogo paid $9,500 in Dist. 63 deal

The resignation of Supt. G. Allan Gogo last week was part of a deal worked out between him and the East Maine Dist. 63 Board of Education in which he will be paid $9,500 to leave without breaking his contract. Gogo is in the first year of a three-year contract that calls for $42,000 per year salary. If he had been fired by the board, the district would have had to pay him $84,000 for the remaining two years of the contract. This week the board accepted Gogo's resignation and approved payment of the $9,500. Gogo will collect the money when the school year ends. His resignation is effective June 30, after which he will become superintendent of Lake Park High School Dist. 108 in Roselle.

'Ask for water' law ordered

Restaurant patrons in Schaumburg soon will have to order water with their meals or do without it. Schaumburg officials have ordered Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel to prepare an ordinance requiring restaurants to serve drinking water only on request. The law was recommended by the village environmental committee as a way of saving water. Mount Prospect officials report moderate success with a voluntary restaurant water restriction policy begun in October. Down the Hatch, 425 S. Roselle Rd., is one of several Schaumburg restaurants already not serving water unless requested by patrons. "Generally, about 90 per cent of our patrons haven't noticed water is not automatically placed on tables," said manager Connie Svedman.

Carr asks end to auto theft talk

Former Des Plaines policeman Daniel Carr, who was fired from the police department Sept. 22 for allegedly selling abandoned automobiles to a Waukegan car crushing firm without police permission, Wednesday demanded that City Atty. Charles Hug stop implying he is a car thief. "Arrest me for auto theft, or stop talking about it," said Carr, an aldermanic candidate in the April 19 city election. Carr objected to statements Hug made in the press accusing the former policeman of "acting in a manner that is highly indicative of a theft." In answering Carr, Hug said "All I can say is that's what the charge stated. We could have very easily filed criminal charges." A Cook County Circuit Court judge last week ruled that the Des Plaines Board of Police Commissioners must reconsider Carr's firing.

Western Onion vows no tears with its messages

by ARNOLD DIBBLE

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Should a juggler on a unicycle drop in and sing you a song to make the blues go away, be not dismayed. It's Western Onion calling.

Western Onion is the brainchild of two young women who stepped into the void left when Western Union discontinued the singing telegram.

They used assumed names — Elizabeth Everett and Troyanne Taylor — so their regular jobs won't be jeopardized. But that probably won't be a factor much longer.

"We've got so many calls that, well, we haven't had to quit our jobs yet, but we've had to take some time off," said Ms. Taylor Wednesday in a telephone interview.

"THE CALLS are coming in so fast, we're having trouble handling them," she said.

"The idea came over lunch," Ms. Taylor said. "And frankly, we just don't know what to make of the response. It's been overwhelming. We decided at lunch we'd go by the seat of our pants. Now, I guess we'll need some new ones."

"We had auditions yesterday. It was fantastic. Absolutely fantastic. We've got a handsome kid who juggles while riding a unicycle and he can sing.

"Most of them are college kids," she said. "Elizabeth and I wanted primarily youth — kids going to school who need the money."

WESTERN ONION is devoted to smiles and no tears. It will send no threats or insults — only happy songs. Telephone messages cost $10, personal appearances $20. SpCialized lyrics come extra.

"We've hired a lyricist," Ms. Taylor said. "We've got a new birthday message to the tune of 'Hello Dolly,' and a message for divorce and depression to (the tune of) 'Cabaret.' "

To preserve the element of surprise, they refuse to divulge their lyrics. But Hal Robinson, a 19-year-old potter, still is doing erratic things at his wheel after the bombshell visit of a y'ung lady dressed in pants and vest who burst in and started singing to the tune of "Everything's Coming Up Roses."

"Our concept," Ms. Taylor said, "is to bring show business to your door."

Boy, dad's quickness saves neighbor in car mishap

by NANCY GOTLER

Eleven-year-old Harry Decker thought something was amiss Wednesday when he saw a cat dart nervously from beneath the wheels of his neighbor Kathryn Bedingfield's car.

But when he watched her car plow into the garage of her home at 1001 E. Mayfair Rd., Arlington Heights, he realized something else was wrong. His quick-thinking rescue of Mrs. Bedingfield, who had blacked out and was trapped in her running car, may have saved her from serious injury.

"When I saw what happened I ran home and told my dad her car was on fire," Harry said. "He called the fire department and we went back over there to help her."

MRS. BEDINGFIELD'S 1976 Chevrolet was not on fire, but smoke from the spinning wheels traveled as far away as Harry's stepfather's duplex at 1006 E. Northwest Hwy., a block from the Bedingfields' home.

Scott Moffat, Harry's stepfather, said when he and Harry reached the accident scene, his neighbor was unconscious and slumped over the steering wheel. The horn was blowing and her foot was pushing the accelerator to the floor.

"The wheels were spinning so fast that the back tires were disintegrated," Moffat said. "I thought we better get her out. So I pulled off a garage window that was in the way and used a piece of wood from the garage to break the back window of the car, roll down the window near her and pull her out."

Mrs. Bedingfield said she doesn't remember the accident and woke up several hours later at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights where she had been taken by paramedics.

"I vaguely remember pulling into the driveway and waking up at the hospital but nothing in between," she said.

MRS. BEDINGFIELD said she was given a brain scan at the hospital to determine what had caused her black out.

Besides damaging the car and garage, a gas main was broken during the accident. Gas to the house was turned off.

"The gas main could have blown if we hadn't gotten there in time because the car was running wide open," Moffat said. "And she may have succumbed to the gas or fumes. I'm just glad we were able to help."

3 threatened to kill Hearst, Bailey reveals

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Patricia Hearst, fearful for her life, gave authorities the names of three persons she thought wanted to kill her during her bank robbery trial, her attorney revealed Wednesday.

F. Lee Bailey, urging a three-judge appeals court panel to overturn her robbery conviction, disclosed that she had given the names of Steven Soliah, Kathy Soliah and James Kilgore to the U.S. attorneys in San Francisco and Sacramento.

"We did this in an effort to get them off the streets so they wouldn't kill her, which they tried to do," Bailey said.

He later told reporters that his mention of attempts on her life rtferred to bombings of the Hearst Castle at San Simeon, Calif., and a Hearst family ranch in northern California. Miss Hearst was not at either location when the bombings took place last year.

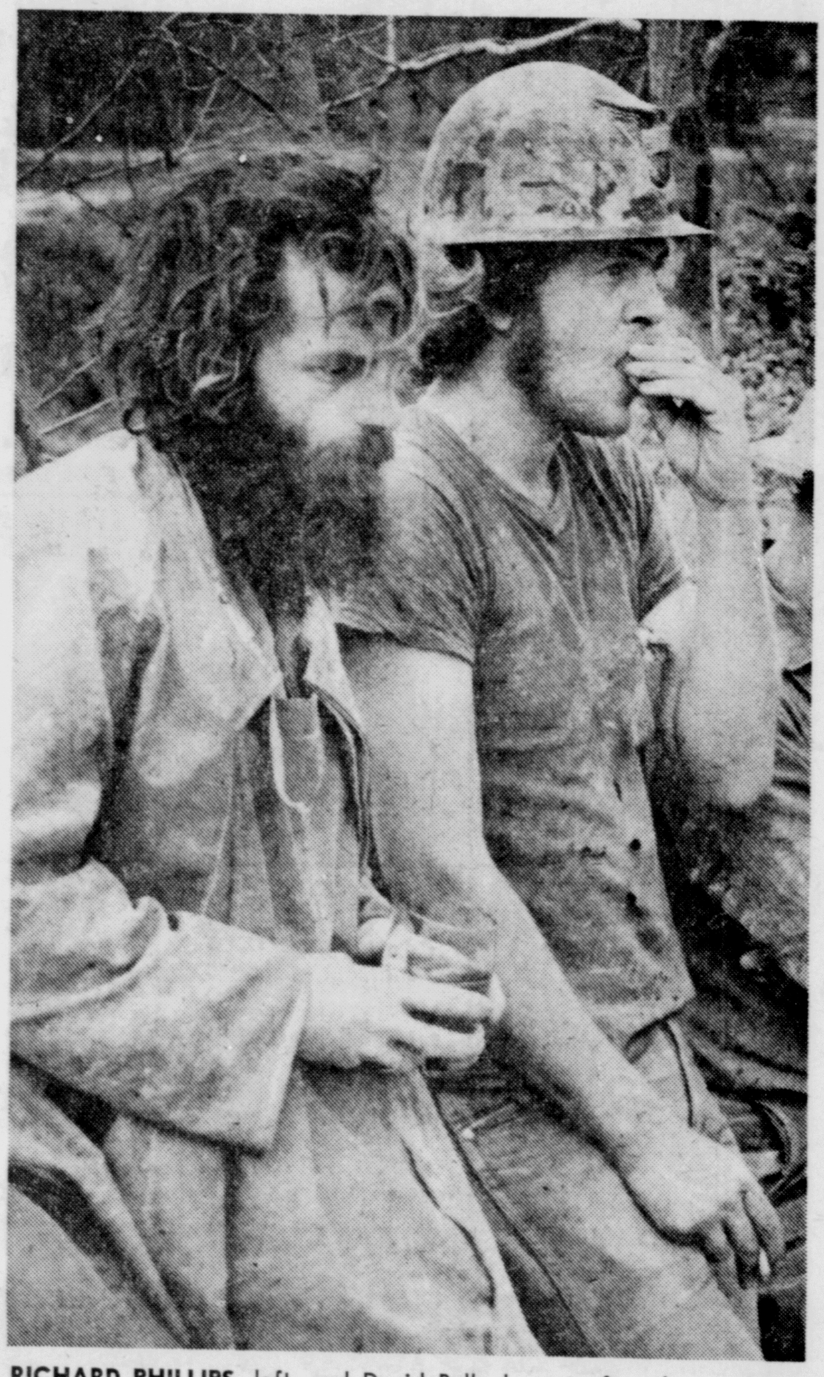
SOLIAH WAS arrested the same day as Miss Hearst was captured in San Francisco, and she later testified she had lived with him while she was a fugitive. He later was acquitted on another bank robbery charge. Soliah's sister, Kathy, and Kilgore still are at large.

Bailey and U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. appeared before the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to argue whether Miss Hearst's conviction should be overturned. Miss Hearst, who is free on $1.25 million bail, was not present in the small, packed courtroom, but her parents were.

The panel took the case under submission.

Bailey argued that errors by the trial judge, the late Oliver J. Carter, were instrumental in the jury's decision to convict her.

He said he has been assured by Carter that the prosecution would not be allowed to question her about events during a "missing year" after the robbery and before her arrest but that the judge reversed himself after she took the stand. Browning argued there had been no such assurances.



RICHARD PHILLIPS, left, and David Bullock, rest after they and two other men fainted Wednesday in a blasting shaft at the Metropolitan Sanitary District's deep tunnel project site, Williams Street and Berkshire Avenue, Mount Prospect. A dynamite blast two hours earlier depleted the shaft of its oxygen. One worker, John Shorter, 48, of Rosemont, was treated at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge, and released. James McHugh Construction Co. officials, right, check the oxygen level of the shaft.

gallon tax on gasoline, or more than double the current federal tax of 4 cents. After that, another nickel a gallon tax in each year gasoline consumption rises by 1 per cent or more nationwide, to a maximum of 50 cents a gallon over 10 years.

- Auto tax: a "gas guzzler" tax on manufacturers of automobiles that fail to meet increasingly tough federal gasoline mileage standards. The tax would start at $412 a car for the poorest performers and could rise to $2,500 a car by 1985. Manufacturers turning out high-performance cars as well as gas guzzlers would get some of the penalties rebated.
- Oil tax: a wellhead tax of several dollars a barrel on oil produced within the United States, adding about 10 per cent to the pump price of gasoline and hitting the consumer again.
- Natural gas prices: an increase in the federally regulated ceiling on natural gas prices, plus a tax on industrial use of gas, to force industry to convert to coal.

The Journal said the draft also contains rewards for energy conservers, including tax credits for homeowners who install insulation or solar heating devices, and for utility companies that switch to coal as a power source.

panies will sell no more gas because of self-service.

Other local operators such as Dan Rutkowski of the Ranch Mart Mobile in Buffalo Grove, said self service will replace mini-service.

Bob Copeland of Bob's Standard Service in Elk Grove Village, echoed other dealers who said he will not make the change right away.

BILL DLANIS, manager of a Wheeling service station, said he thought the self-service proposal "stinks."

"You still have to have someone collect the money," he said.

Station owner Harold Gleason of Des Plaines argued he "has too many good customers who won't come to us if we go self-service."

Joseph Vermiglio, who operates a Marathon Station in Schaumburg, said the parent company will dictate whether self-service is offered, but said he would fight the move although he only manages the station at Golf Road and Highland Boulevard.

While service might be the unpopular trend, at least among the station operators, several owners predicted there will still be someone available to pump gas.

"I think people will still want service, especially if they are going out for the evening," said Jack Rigsby, a Rolling Meadows service station operator.

'Vision' put Patty at murder site

by DAVE IBATA

Patricia Columbo said she had a "vision" that placed her in the home of her slain family the night of the murders, a former police detective testified Wednesday.

Miss Columbo told police she had the vision of her slain mother, father and 13-year-old brother May 17, 1976, two days after police arrested her for the killings, said John G. Landers, former detective for the Elk Grove Village Police Dept.

Landers, who is now administrative assistant to the director of law enforcement in Illinois, took the witness stand during a pretrial hearing for Miss Columbo, 20, and Frank DeLuca, 39, in Cook County Circuit Court, Chicago.

MISS COLUMBO and DeLuca are charged with the May 4, 1976 slayings of Frank, Mary and 13-year-old Michael Columbo at their home at 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

Landers testified in Judge R. Eugene Pincham's courtroom on a defense motion to suppress statements Miss Columbo gave to police after they arrested her.

Miss Columbo, who has been held at the Cook County Jail, Chicago, had asked that Landers and Det. Gene Gargiano of the Cook County Sheriff's Police visit her May 17, 1976, Landers said.

Landers said he advised Miss Columbo of her right to consult with her court-appointed attorney before she gave statements to police, but she replied, "F — that little a—h—, I'm going to talk to you whether he says to or not."

Miss Columbo told the detectives she had received a vision in the Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court, where she had been taken earlier May 17 to be arraigned, Landers said.

LANDERS DESCRIBED Miss Columbo's vision:

In the vision, Miss Columbo said, she had seen herself standing outside the Columbo family home. Her brother answered the door, and her father then told Michael to go upstairs to his bedroom.

Miss Columbo then said she saw her father, mother and brother lying on floors in different parts of the house. She described how each family member was dressed, and said she also saw a pair of bloody scissors.

Her vision matched what police found when they discovered the slayings May 4, 1976.

LANDERS SAID he asked Miss Columbo, "Pat, do you see yourself in the house, having anything to do with the killings?"

Landers said Miss Columbo answered, "I could have been. I'm kind of confused. Maybe I was there. I think I was there."

Miss Columbo then asked, "If Frank (DeLuca) was there, would you give him immunity?" Landers said.

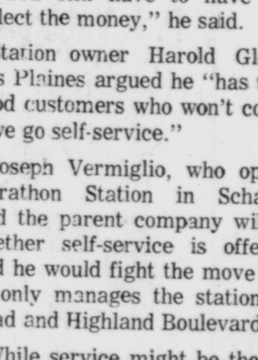
"I just don't believe it," said Karen Bullock, 29, wife of James Bullock, 34, of Marion, Ark., who is hospitalized with injuries from a car crash last month. Presley himself was released from a hospital last week for treatment of flu and fatigue.
- Olympic swim champion Mark Spitz will be at the Northwest Suburban YMCA in Des Plaines today from 5 to 7 p.m. to talk swimming and sign autographs. With seven gold Olympic medals pinned to his chest, Spitz went on to do a few television commercials and some sports commentary for ABC. He'll tell fans and reporters what he's been up to lately.



Rosalynn Carter

- First Lady Rosalynn Carter plans to tour the community mental health center at Northwestern University while in Chicago Tuesday. It also was announced Wednesday Mrs. Carter will serve as honorary chairman of the board of trustees for the John Fitzgerald Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington D.C.
- Television co-anchorman Walter Jacobson was fined $105 Wednesday and ordered not to drive for four months. Jacobson, of Channel 2, was found guilty in Traffic Court of driving with a suspended license. He was acquitted on charges of driving with his headights off when an officer stopped him on his way to broadcast the 10 p.m. news last March 16. His license was suspended after he amassed three moving violations.
- The Colorado Health Dept. has condemned a cramped jail cell in which singer-actress Claudine Longet was to have been confined for 30 days for the shooting death of her lover, skier Vladimir (Spider) Sabich. Longet instead will serve her term at the Garfield County Jail in nearby Glenwood Springs.
- President Carter's daughter-in-law, Judy, who suffered a miscarriage after a four-month pregnancy Tuesday, was released Wednesday from Bethesda Naval Hospital. The 27-year-old wife of Jack Carter was visiting Camp David, Md., with First Lady Rosalynn Carter when she became ill.
- Comedian and movie producer Mel Brooks has been sued for $2 million by Nathan Cohen who contends Brooks' film "Silent Movie" was plagiarized from a 1974 script Cohen wrote entitled "Jack and the Lean Talk" which he submitted to Brooks.

Man shoots wife, 2 others, then self

A man police said had mental problems shot and killed three members of his family, including his wife, Wednesday, then turned the gun on himself. The bodies of Willy D. Jones, 25, and his wife, Rena Radcliff Jones, 21, were found on the blood spattered front porch of their South Side Chicago home. Mrs. Jones had been shot in the neck and back. Jones had a bullet wound through the right temple. The bodies of Anthony Radcliff, 26, Mrs. Jones' brother, and Larry Williams, 16, her nephew who had spent the night at the house, were found in the basement, Investigator Vincent M. Russo said. Each had been shot twice and Radcliff's throat was slashed.

Russo said Mrs. Jones' 21-month-old daughter apparently was the only witness to the slayings. Police found her unharmed lying beside the body of her uncle. Mrs. Jones' mother, Priscilla Radcliff, and eight other children also lived in the house but were not home at the time, Russo said. He said Mrs. Jones had three children, all under 5-years of age. Russo said no motive has been established for the shooting. But he said family members who gathered at the scene told police Jones, who was unemployed, had a history of mental problems.

Gunman wounds 2 officers

A young man strolled into the Gresham District police station Wednesday and, without saying a word, shot two policemen. Edward McGovern, 32, was shot in the left arm and James Nielsen, 44, was grazed across his back. Both were in good condition at Little Company of Mary Hospital. Police said officer Michael McMahon, 34, who was unarmed, tackled Roosevelt Parnell, 21, wrestled with him on the station floor, and got his .38 caliber revolver from him.

Desk Sgt. Mark Schoenbein, 54, said Parnell walked into the South Side station during the day-shift roll call and "pulled a .38 caliber snub-nosed revolver out of his pocket, held it in both hands just a couple of feet from me. "I was sitting behind the desk. I grabbed for my gun as he fired at me. The shot he fired missed me." Parnell then fired four more shots before McMahon jumped him. A Cook County grand jury named Parnell in an indictment charging him with four counts of attempted murder.

Clues sought in bombing

Police went from house to house Wednesday in Glenview looking for clues in the bombing of a teamsters union officials's car. The bomb exploded under the hood of an empty car in the driveway of James Schoessling's home Tuesday night. Schoessling is a business agent for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Police have been unable to determine whether the bomb was meant for Schoessling, 34, or his father, Ray, secretary-treasurer of the teamsters union. The elder Schoessling recently moved from the house. Authorities said the bomb blew a hole a foot wide in the driveway. Schoessling was home with his two daughters at the time. No one was injured.

Water allocations slated

Lake Michigan water allocations for the Chicago metropolitan area are scheduled to be announced in two weeks. The allocations will set the amount of water that can be taken from the lake for use by the suburbs now dependent on dwindling ground water supplies.

Announcement of the allocations by the Illinois Department of Transportation originally was scheduled for December 1976, but has been repeatedly delayed. The formula determined by the state must be approved in court before it can go into effect.

Airlines told to release tapes

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Louis Giliberto Wednesday ordered Pan American and KLM Royal Dutch airlines to provide copies of the taped radio transmssions made just before their two 747 airliners crashed at Santa Cruz de Tenerife Airport in the Canary Islands. The collision March 27 killed 577 persons in the worst aviation disaster in history. Giliberto acted in a $6 million damage suit filed by Chicago attorney John J. Kennelly on behalf of Robert and Marianne Jakoubek, Visalia, Calif., two passengers aboard the Pan American plane. Jakoubek was killed in the crash and Mrs. Jakoubeck seriously injured.

"Why the mystery?" asked Kennelly. "It should be a matter of public record whether the KLM pilot got permission to take off from the airport." The suit charged the two airlines with negligence for allegedly not having radar which would have warned the pilots of the immediate danger. It also charged KLM with negligence because the pilot did not have take off clearance according to news reports.

2nd open cabinet meeting held

Gov. James R. Thompson held his second open cabinet meeting Wednesday with an agenda that stressed a "save a little here, save a little there" theme. The first item of business Thompson took up was to ask for a list of policy-making positions in the various departments which are still unfilled or which were filled by former Gov. Daniel Walker. Thompson has been attempting to clean Walker employes out of policy-making positions, but said he has only received lists from 10 departments and agencies.

But the major area of the cabinet meeting was cost cutting and increasing efficiency in government. Theodore Puckorius, director of the Dept. of General Services, outlined areas where costs may be cut. He said the departments and agencies should look at a reduction of spending in contracting legal services, printing costs, leasing property and using equipment. He said the state has a surplus of some equipment and asked departments to check if there is surplus equipment before buying new equipment. As an example, Puckorius said, there are 27 air conditioners which have been sitting in storage for several years.

Couple held in son's death

A McLeansboro couple was held Wednesday on murder charges in the apparent beating death of the woman's 3-year-old son, authorities said. Named in the complaints filed Tuesday by Hamilton County State's Atty. Alan Downen were Leonard Schultz, 29, and Mrs. Debra Patterson, 25. A coroner's jury ruled Tuesday that Joseph Trent Patterson died from a blow to the abdomen and recommended further investigation of his death. The child died Sunday in Hamilton Memorial Hospital. Coroner Ruth McDonald said Schultz and Mrs. Patterson lived together.

Mayor charged with conflict

Rock Island State's Atty. Edward Keefe announced Wednesday he has filed a conflict of interest suit against East Moline Mayor Dennis Jacobs. The civil suit claims that Jacobs' private business concern is in conflict with his jobs as city liquor commissioner. Jacobs is co-owner of J and J Music, a business which places juke boxes, pool tables and pinball machines in a number of East Moline taverns. Jacobs told reporters Wednesday the suit was "asinine" and was brought by his "political enemies."

Home rule now respected power

by NANCY GOTLER

After an uncertain beginning marred by a court challenge and citizen unrest, home rule in Arlington Heights has become a respected source of power and change.

In the six years since the adoption of home rule as part of the 1970 Illinois Constitution, Arlington Heights has used the power to expand the village board, issue flood-control bonds and reclassify the village clerk as an appointed officer.

"There's no question but that home rule was a step into the 20th Century for us as far as community government is concerned," Village Pres. James T. Ryan said.

"It gives us a great deal of latitude as far as taxation is concerned and gives us more control over our own destiny," he said.

HOWEVER, THE ROAD to confident use of home-rule powers has not been an easy one and trustees say the question is still being resolved.

In 1973 the village's precedent-setting decision to expand the board to nine members was challenged but upheld by the Illinois Supreme Court.

And in 1975 more than 2,000 residents signed a petition and threatened to call for a vote to revoke home-rule powers if trustees decided to finance a proposed Chicago Bears Stadium without a referendum.

However, most trustees feel the village has used its home-rule powers wisely and sparingly.

"I've heard no complaint from anyone about how we're using home rule in the two years I've been on the board," Trustee August Bettman said. "And I'm sure if people were unhappy about it they would let us know."

TRUSTEE DAVID GRIFFIN, who opposed issuing $3.2 million in flood-control bonds in 1975 after the project failed in a referendum, warned that home rule should be used conservatively.

"There's a danger Arlington Heights could go too far," he said. "I've always been a little skeptical about justifying the issuance of general obligation bonds without a referendum. If we're not careful we could anger people to vote out home-rule powers."

Arlington Heights has barely scratched the surface of potential uses of home rule, Village Atty. Jack Siegel said.

The village could enact gasoline, cigarette and liquor taxes, increase the local 1-cent sales tax and charge a fee for real estate transactions, he said.

However, home rule doesn't give a community absolute power. A town cannot impose an income tax, adopt a criminal code, license for revenue or license occupations like doctors or lawyers.

"Most importantly," Siegel said, "home rule ties responsibility for local government right at home. Local officials are held accountable for local government's actions. They can't pass the buck."

10% salary, benefit hike given Gilbert

Edward Gilbert

Supt. Edward Gilbert has been given a 10 per cent increase in salary and benefits in a three-year contract approved this week by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education.

Gilbert must decide whether to take the full 10 per cent increase as a pay raise or divide it between additional fringe benefits and a salary raise.

With the increase, Gilbert's salary and benefits amount to $52,800 a year.

Employed as Dist. 214 superintendent since 1966, Gilbert currently has an annual salary of $45,000 and receives an additional $3,000 in life insurance benefits. His last salary and benefits increase came in March 1976 and totaled $3,500.

Gilbert's salary compares favorably with superintendent salaries in neighboring high school districts. The superintendent in High School Dist. 211 earns $48,000 a year and in High School Dist. 207 the superintendent earns $47,100.

Costello elected board president

John Costello, 301 N. Dale, Mount Prospect, has been elected president of the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education.

Costello, who joined the board in 1969, succeeds Donald Hoeck as president.

John Gmitro, 339 S. Windsor, Arlington Heights, has been elected board secretary.

Appointed to the board in September, Gmitro Saturday won his first elected three-year position on the board.

Village prosecutes under vandal law

A 16-year-old Arlington Heights youth will be prosecuted by the village under its new vandalism ordinance for allegedly knocking down 25 mailboxes with his car.

The compoaint against the youth was filed in Cook County Circuit Court this week. His case is scheduled for May 16.

The youth also is charged with reckless driving, failing to report damage to private property and driving off the roadway.

This is only the seocnd time the village has decided to prosecute an alleged vandal under an ordinance passed in August. The law requires restitution for the value of the damaged property and a fine up to $500 with parents held responsible for the payments.

Cincinnati schools struck by teachers

Teachers demanding a 16 per cent pay increase struck the 65,000-student Cincinnati public school system Wednesday. Although a teachers' union official claimed classes were left in "chaos," schools remained open. "More than 2,000 teachers (out of 3,100) are participating in the strike," estimated Bob Bates, of Washington, a representative of the American Federation of Teachers. "The condition in most schools is best characterized as chaotic." School Superintendent James Jacobs dispatched administrators to fill in for striking teachers and reported all 104 schools were open, but conceded, "We make no pretense we're operating an adequate educational program."

Carter OAS talk seen as major

President Carter Thursday will offer "new directions" for Washington's relations with Latin America in his first major statement on hemispheric policy, officials said. They indicated Carter's Pan American Day speech to the Organization of American States will include a reaffirmation of his strong commitment to human rights. It will be a "substantive and major policy address," administration officials said.

"I believe there are several new aspects, new departures" that will be presented, White House Press Secretary Judy Powell added later. Trade and economic issues also are expected to figure prominently in the address in which, according to the officials, Carter "will offer new directions for our policy" toward Latin America.

No word on hijack accord's life

Neither Fidel Castro nor the State Department gave a hint Wednesday of any moves to prolong past Friday midnight the life of the 1973 U.S.-Cuban hijacking agreement, which never was put to a real test. Castro himself, who renounced the agreement last fall charging CIA responsibility for the crash of a Cuban airliner, made clear to Sen. George McGovern last week he will not renew the accord unless Washington lifts its economic embargo against Cuba. The State Department said Wednesday it had not been informed by Cuba of any change in Castro's position.

Soviet ship evidence probed

The Coast Guard stalked foreign fishing vessels off the New England coast Wednesday while officials searched for evidence of fisheries violations aboard two Soviet ships held in Boston Harbor. A team of Coast Guard and National Marine Fisheries Service officials studied logbooks of the trawler Taras Shevchencko and the refrigerator-transport ship Antanas Snechkus to help the U.S. attorney decide whether to file civil or criminal charges. ULS. attorney James N. Gabriel said he would wait for the team's report before deciding what charges to press under the Fishery Conservation and Management Act of 1976 which regulates fishing within 200 miles of the U.S. shoreline.

Fiat chief kidnaped in Paris

The president of the French branch of the Italian automobile firm Fiat was kidnaped Wednesday night in front of his home in an elegant residential section of Paris and a ransom of $600,000 was demanded for his return, police said. Eyewitnesses said they had seen four or five men carrying firearms attack Luchino Revelli-Beaumont, a 58-year-old Fiat executive, and his chauffeur, police said. Police said the chauffeur, whose name was not given, was slightly injured when he attempted to stop the assailants from kidnaping Revelli-Beaumont at about 11 p.m. (3 p.m. CST) in the exclusive 16th District just off Bois de Boulogne Park. In a telephone call to a French radio station, a man identifying himself as the spokesman of "The Committee for the Defense of Italian Workers in France" said his group was responsible for the kidnaping.

Moroccan troops to Kolwezi

Moroccan troops have been airlifted to Kolwezi in the center of Zaire's copper belt and are preparing for a major offensive against invading forces from Angola, Western diplomatic sources reported Wednesday. "We've heard the (Moroccan) troops are being grouped around Kolwezi and that within a week or so they will join Zairean soldiers in a concentrated move westward toward the Angolan border to confront the invaders," one source said.

Such an offensive was expected to prompt the fiercest and most extensive fighting since the invasion force crossed from Angola March 7. In the early days of the invasion, the rebels captured several border towns with little resistance from Zairean troops. The diplomatic sources in Kinshasa said about half an initial Moroccan force of 1,500 men had reached Kolwezi, about 220 miles from the Angolan border and center of the former Belgian Congo's copper industry. Kinshasa officials say an additional 1,500-man contingent has been promised by Rabat.

Car blasts mark war's anniversary in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Two booby-trapped cars packed with explosives blew up Wednesday in the Christian suburb of Ain Rummaneh, two years after the "Ain Rummaneh Massacre" that started the Lebanese civil war.

A Lebanese security officer on the scene said about 10 persons were wounded by the twin blasts, which occurred within 15 minutes of each other.

The two cars had been parked about 800 yards from the Maronite Catholic Church where, on April 13, 1975, Christian and Palestinian gunmen fought two street battles and unknowingly ignited a bloody, two-year civil war that killed more than 40,000 persons.

One car was about block from the local headquarters of the rightist Christian National Liberal Party, the officer said. The other was about 300 yards from an office of the rightist Maronite League.

THE EXPLOSIONS blew large holes in the streets beneath the cars and shattered windows for blocks around, the officer said.

"We thought it was mortar fire. It sounded as if the war had started all over again," Francois Ghattas, a local resident, said.

"One of the cars was a Renault 12," the security officer said. "The other was so badly damaged it's unrecognizable."

Christian militiamen, known as "The Tigers," sealed off the area and fired into the air to disperse onlookers. No troops of the Arab League peacekeeping force were patrolling the neighborhood, one of Beirut's rightist Christian strongholds.

In south Lebanon, Palestinian guerrillas and rightist militiamen fought artillery duels along the tense border with Israel, marking the war's second anniversary with continued bloodshed.

THE GUN DUELS raged along the eastern end of the 60-mile border, in the area known as the "Maryjayoun Front," after the strategically located rightist stronghold that controls key roads south toward Israel from the guerrilla-held Arquob region.

Since Tuesday, Christian troops in Marjayoun and Kleia swapped mortar, small missile and heavy artillery fire with Palestinian guerrilla positions at Khiam, Ebel es Saqi, Blat, Rashaya Fukhar, Freidis, along the Hasbani River basin and in the Arquob.

There was no immediate report on casualties or damages.

Beirut newspapers, under strict censorship, made no reference to the anniversary.

Village orders 'ask for water' law to conserve

Patrons of Schaumburg restaurants soon will be required to order water with their meals or go without the taken-for-granted beverage.

Schaumburg officials have told Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel to prepare an ordinance to require restaurants to serve drinking water only on request.

The new law has been recommended by the village environmental committee as one of several water conservation methods.

ALTHOUGH VILLAGE officials say they have no idea how much water might be saved in the new program, Public Health Director Robert Grossmann has been told to develop estimates.

Trustee Ray LeBeau was the only village official to vote against the new water regulation. LeBeau said he favors the idea of restricting drinking water in restaurants, but "I would prefer to see the restaurant operators cooperate with us on a voluntary basis."

Mount Prospect village officials report moderate success with a voluntary restaurant water restriction policy begun in October.

Down the Hatch restaurant, 425 S. Roselle Rd., is one of several Schaumburg restaurants that does not serve water unless requested by patrons.

"Generally, about 90 per cent of our patrons haven't noticed that water is not automatically placed on the tables," manager Connie Svedman said.

WHILE MS. SVEDMAN said the restaurant "probably" saves some money on water bills, "the all-around savings is tremendous when you consider the glass breakage and extra busboy trips we have eliminated."

Chris Pappas, a partner in the Lancer Steak House restaurant, 50 E. Algonquin Rd., said Wednesday he approves of the water restriction and would have no problem putting it into practice.

"I have seen this done in good taste and handled properly and think it's a good idea. But when a customer requests water he must be served immediately," Pappas said.

Pappas said he believes the Lancer could cut water costs about 25 per cent under the new mandatory system. "But, that's a drop in the hat when you consider the hundreds of thousands of gallons used in the washing and rinsing cycles over a year's time," he said.

Carr asks end to Hug's allegations of car theft

Former Des Plaines policeman Daniel Carr Wednesday demanded City Atty. Charles Hug stop implying he is a car thief.

"Arrest me for auto theft, or stop talking about it," said Carr, a candidate for 1st Ward alderman in Tuesday's municipal election.

Carr, 37, of 2535 Suffield St., was fired from the police department Sept. 22 for selling abandoned automobiles to a Waukegan car crushing firm without police permission.

CARR OBJECTED to statements Hug made to the press accusing him of "acting in a manner that is highly indicative of a theft."

"All I can say is, that's what the charge stated," Hug said Wednesday, adding, "We could have very easily filed criminal charges."

A Cook County Circuit Court judge last week ordered the Des Plaines Board of Police Commissioners to reconsider Carr's firing.

In firing Carr, the board charged him with conduct unbecoming an officer, violation of state and local laws and obstruction of justice.

Hug said the "conduct unbecoming an officer" charge was based on Carr's acting in a manner "that is highly indicative of theft."

JUDGE ARTHUR L. DUNNE, acting on Carr's appeal of the firing, upheld this charge and the charge he violated state and local laws. He ruled the city had no grounds for the obstruction of justice charge, however, and ordered the board to reconsider the case.

"If you commit a crime, you don't just get fired," Carr said Wednesday. "If there's a theft, there's a theft. If there's not a theft, there's not a theft."

Although Carr was fired, no criminal charges were filed by the city. Hug said the city decided not to file charges because firing Carr was penalty enough.

Carr denied he is a thief.

"There's no way I'm going to jeopardize a $17,000 a year job for a few hundred dollars," he said.

May 4 is your last chance to make changes in the new Arlington Heights phone book.

Would you like to change your listing in the White Pages? If your name isn't listed, maybe you'd like it to be. Or perhaps you'd like to add a separate listing for others in your household.

There's a $6 service charge for residence customers and $10 for business customers to help offset clerical costs for making the change (exceptions: a legal name change, or correcting a spelling error on our part). You can also obtain an "extra" directory listing for a monthly charge of 75¢ for residence customers and $1.10 for business customers.

But if you want to make a change in your White Pages listing, call your Service Representative now. The number is on your telephone bill and in your local directory. If you don't call by May 4, we'll have to say, "Sorry, the presses are rolling."

Machine offers the blind new reading opportunities

IN BRIGHT RED dots on a small screen, a teacher is able to see what letter the blind student is feeling with his finger.

by DIANE GRANAT

Bob Howland, like most 17-year-old boys, can't wait to get his hands on a copy of "Playboy" magazine.

When he does it will be the first time the Mount Prospect youth will be able to choose what he reads.

Bob, who is blind, ordinarily is restricted to reading books transcribed into braille or listening to taped "talking books."

NOW WITH THE help of an Optacon, a reading machine for the blind, Bob is learning how to read normal printed material. And when he masters the use of the Optacon, Bob said the first things he wants to read on his own are "dirty magazines."

Similar to the raised dot language of braille, the Optacon relies on the sense of touch to help the blind read.

But unlike braille, which has its own alphabet, the Optacon reproduces exactly what is printed into a tingling sensation that a blind person can feel with one finger.

THE PORTABLE MACHINE, about the size of a small cassette tape recorder, was first produced in 1970 by Telesensory Systems, Inc. in California. Its use was limited to adults who could purchase it until recently, when the federal government made some machines available to schools and blind students.

Bob, of 1706 Mura Ln., Mount Prospect, is one of three youngsters in the north suburban area receiving training in school in the Optacon's use by traveling teacher Judy Masters of the Regional Service Agency, a special education cooperative.

The three students — Bob, Jeff Bates of Bunffalo Grove and Sheila Weil of Highland Park — also recently received their own Optacon machines from the federal government to use at home. The only cost to the student was the insurance fee paid by their parents.

Mrs. Masters spends one hour each day with Bob at Wheeling High School, where he is a student. Bob is earning an independent study credit in English for his work with the machine, which he began in late January

BECAUSE BLIND students are not familiar with the shapes of letters in the alphabet they first must learn to "visualize" them with their fingers, Mrs. Masters said. Bob uses cards with a raised figure of each letter underneath the braille symbol for that letter to learn the alphabet.

Once he can distinguish the shape of the letters — after two months Bob has already learned 18 of the 26 letters — he will work entirely with the electronic machine.

Bob, born blind, now can read simple sentences with the Optacon, such as "It is too hot to run." His reading level in braille is much higher.

While his finger is feeling the vibrating pins, Mrs. Masters, who is sighted, follows along on an attached screen which shows in bright red dots what Bob is reading.

Although the Optacon allows the blind to read materials that have not been transcribed into braille "it will never replace braille," Mrs. Masters said.

"It is not as fast as braille," she said. "It is physically impossible to get past 80 words a minute" while with braille readers can sometimes double that speed or go even higher.

FOR TEXTBOOKS and long reading assignments, Mrs. Masters said the students still will use braille. But for personal reading the Optacon gives blind persons new independence, she said. It also is useful for them to read their own mail or other confidential materials, she said.

Bob's parents said they were considering buying him an Optacon as a graduation present from college. "If it meant his own earning power would be greater if he had it, we thought we would get it," his mother, Ann, said. "But we never thought we would get it now — until the government came along."

The Optacon is opening up Bob's opportunities for college. "Having this now gives me more freedom where I want to go to college," Bob said. "I could go anywhere," he said, not just the University of Illinois, which has special facilities for blind students.

For Bob the Optacon also means that he will be able to read just like his friends.

Besides giving him access to forbidden magazines — "they do have Playboy in braille but my parents won't let me get it," Bob admits — Bob said he is excited about not being singled out by other kids because he reads in braille.

"All of a sudden you're sitting there able to read like anyone else," he said. "It's freaky."

BOB HOWLAND, a blind student from Wheeling High School, slips his left index finger into the Optacon, where vibrating pins form the shapes of letters. With his right hand he moves a small camera along a normal printed page. The camera transmits the words to the machine, which translates the print into a tingling sensation. At his left, teacher Judy Masters follows along.

THE OPTACON, an electronic machine for the blind, is about the size of a portable cassette tape recorder. The reading possibilities it provides blind people are enormous.

Chamber chiefs elected

At the recent Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors meeting, Edmund J. Pawelko Jr., was elected president and Kenneth Ruud was elected vice president.

Pawelko is vice president of business development at Arlington Heights Federal Savings and Loan. Ruud is owner of Kenneth A. Ruud Realtors.

Filling other vacancies on the board are Mike Cook of Bill Cook Buick, and Marvin Schmitman of Sir Speedy.

Eichelman to be cadet

The U.S. Coast Guard Academy has selected Scott R. Eichelman as a cadet. Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Eichelman of Arlington Heights.

A graduating senior at Prospect High School, Scott is on the varsity football, track and gymnastics teams. He also participates in the Youth Campus Life and is a member of the Sea Explorers.

Church junior high choir

St. Simon's Episcopal Church invites youths in the fourth grade and above to join the junior choir. Rehearsals are held at 7 p.m. every Thursday at the church, 717 Kirchoff Rd., Arlington Heights.

For information call 882-4738 or 392-4028.

Ryan visits Riley School

Arlington Heights Mayor James T. Ryan recently visited the third grade social studies class at Riley School after a personal invitation was extended by Bridget Drury. The mayor discussed village government and answered students' questions.

The mayor has requested Bridget's poster entitled "Arlington Heights — A Suburb of Today," illustrating various facets of village living, transportation, schools, churches and history, for the wall of his office in the municipal building.

Storytelling workshop

A storyteller's workshop open to anyone of high school age or older who would like to learn more about the art of storytelling will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Dunton Room, Arlington Heights Memorial Library, 500 N. Dunton St.

Guest storyteller Jodie Sterba will demonstrate the technique of narrative storytelling for intermediate age children as part of the workshop. Registration is not required and the workshop is free. For information call the library's children's department, 392-0100.

Thompson travels to mold his image

by STEVE BROWN
A news analysis

Gov. James R. Thompson will add to his developing national image twice this week with separate trips to Washington and New York.

The Washington trip today is for a meeting of the National Governor's Conference subcommittee on energy. The eight-member panel also scheduled for a briefing from President Carter and energy adviser James Schlesinger.

The governor does not plan to dally too long in the nation's capital. He will be back in the state Friday before heading to New York to receive the "Future Leader" award from the National Republican Women's Club at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

THE TRIPS PROVIDE another reason for speculation about Thompson's political aspirations.

The speculation points chiefly to "Big Jim" becoming a Republican presidential candidate in 1980.

The governor answers questions about the speculation, but some advisers have begun to wince a little when the talk begins. They fear the governor will begin to develop the image of an ambitious politician rather than a thoughtful state administrator.

The governor acknowledges he must prove he can run Illinois efficiently before giving any thought to running for higher office. He also acknowledges he enscribed a classmate's school yearbook with the notation he would be president in the 1980s.

VICTOR deGRAZIA, THE top aide to former Gov. Daniel Walker, noted recently people really don't mind their governor traveling around the country or admitting to lusting in his heart after the White House.

"If the people voted for him because they thought he was the best candidate, then they probably think he would be a good man for higher office," deGrazia said.

DeGrazia probably is right, but it is a simplistic answer to the problem.

There are some logical reasons for the trips. The new Republican governor has an obligation to help the party, because the GOP controls few states.

Secondly, the Republican governor needs to get a foothold in Washington, because many of the answers to current problems and developments which may become new problems are there.

Energy, the topic of the meetings today, is more a global and national problem and Thompson knows any state program must be compatible with federal proposals.

THE GOVERNOR, KEEPER of the keys to the state's thousands of gasoline burning vehicles, probably has some concern for how much a new federal gasoline tax will cost the fiscally strapped state.

Thompson also will need to work extra hard to build bridges into the Democratic Carter administration. A Washington presence will help.

Thompson's national image and his future in politics can be measured only partially in the trips to Washington and in the national press attention he receives.

Another interesting measurement cropped up Wednesday: Republican National Chairman William Brock announced the Republican National Committee will meet in Chicago instead of Washington.

HAROLD B. SMITH JR., the national committeeman for Illinois, said the RNC has met outside Washington in the past. The last known meeting of the Republican hierarchy outside of the nation's capital was in 1971 in Denver.

"I think it will be more common in the future because we have got to pay more attention to building state parties and electing state candidates," Smith said.

Brock said Illinois was selected as the meeting site because the state carried for former President Ford in November and because of Thompson's overwhelming victory.

Thompson's star continues to rise and now it appears Mohammed does not necessarily have to go to the mountain, sometimes the mountain will come to him.

Nonprescription status suggested for saccharin

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration may allow small amounts of saccharin to be sold as a drug but will not reverse its decision to ban it in diet soft drinks and food, agency officials said Wednesday.

The FDA's decision, to be revealed in detail today at a morning news conference, could leave saccharin with the same legal status it has in Canada.

When that country banned the sweetener last month, on the basis of animal studies that implicated it as a potential cancer causer, it said simultaneously that saccharin in loose or tablet form would continue to be available as a nonprescription drug, just as aspirin is.

THE FDA COULD restrict straight saccharin —sales even further by declaring it a prescription drug, but that course was considered less likely. Either way, the biggest use of saccharin — for diet soft drinks which account for 75 per cent of it — still would be out. Dietetic foods that use saccharin as a sweetener also presumbably would be banned.

Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, said the FDA should have given saccharin nonprescription drug status at the same time it announced its intention to ban the sweetener on March 9.

Wolfe, Nader and others have suggested some FDA officials, acting before President Carter named Donald Kennedy as the new FDA commissioner, handled the saccharin ban the way they did deliberately to provoke public debate over the Delaney amendment. That provision allows no cancer-causing substances in the food supply.

THE BAN PROPOSAL has triggered an outpouring of public protest and criticism from many members of Congress, and the FDA says it welcomes an airing of the Delaney issue.

"They (the FDA) really have done an incredible amount of damage," Wolfe said. "Hopefully, this will lessen it somewhat, and it should narrow the use back to the people who really need saccharin, the diabetics.

"It's too bad the FDA couldn't have thought this thing through as Canada did before making the first announcement which undermined the Delaney amendment and the saccharin ban."

If FDA declares saccharin a nonprescription drug, it would be treated like aspirin or toothpaste, but the FDA would have control over labeling and certain advertising restrictions also could be established.

Hypnotist urges method as cure for many ills

by KURT BAER

Hypnosis still is a dark, shadowy thing for most people.

Whether a part of the occult world, or an act on a Las Vegas night club stage, hypnosis often has a bad reputation.

Lee Schaefer, a practicing hypnotist from Arlington Heights, admits it. But she is one of a dedicated group of hypnotists out to change public opinion.

Mrs. Schaefer is chairman of the third annual Midwest Hypnosis Convention that will run Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Sheraton-Chicago Hotel.

"We have to educate the general public as to what hypnosis is all about. Stage hypnosis, and all the peculiar things that have gone on, have put us in a bad light. People don't realize how they can use hypnosis to help themselves," she says.

LEE SCHAEFER

WEIGHT CONTROL, cigaret smoking, mental relaxation, unidentified flying object research, breast enlargement, childbirth and criminal justice can be aided by hypnosis, proponents say.

"Athletes use hypnosis to visualize performing exactly the way they want to perform," Mrs. Schaefer says. Hypnosis can be used in the Lamaze method of childbirth by "training the person how to be tense in a part of their body and loose everywhere else," she says.

Persons who believe they have sighted a UFO can recall details of the sighting under hypnosis which otherwise they do not remember. In some cases, hypnosis can lead them to admit that they made the whole thing up, says Mrs. Schaefer.

DESPITE THE popular belief, hypnosis is safe, she says. "There are no dangers whatsoever in hypnosis itself. The dangtr comes in with unethical practitioners. They an be medical doctors, or Ph.D's."

One of the most widespread fears is that hypnosis will be used for "sexual gratification" of the practitioner, Mrs. Schaefer says. "We feel that any seduction could probably be done just as well without hypnosis, since most people won't do anything under hypnosis that is against their own morals."

The Association to Advance Ethical Hypnosis and the National Hypnotic Research Center are among the sponsors of the convention. A local chapter of the hypnotic research center holds monthly meetings at the Mount Prospect Library, and interest in hypnosis in the Northwest suburbs is high, Mrs. Schaefer says.

Four of the featured speakers at the upcoming convention are from the Northwest suburbs.

ROBERT CLARK, of Arlington Heights, will discuss "Mind Games and Fantasy Trips;" Barbara Schweitert, of Mount Prospect, will talk about the "Management of Stress to Increase Productivity and Channel Energy;" Flora Frink, Des Plaines, will discuss "Relax and Rebound, the Well-Springs Program;" and Mrs. Schaefer will lecture on "Hypnosis and the Behavior Therapies."

Biofeedback has fueled the interest in hypnosis, says Mrs. Schaefer. "It is becoming recognized that so many of our illnesses are psychosomatic and stress-related. Hypnosis and behavior modification is a way to self-relaxation."

The upcoming convention gives hypnotists an opportunity to compare notes There will even be a contest for the most original hypnotic technique. But Mrs. Schaefer says she hopes the general public will take an interest in the program as well.

"My estimate is that we'll have close to 400 people. There's definitely a growing interest in this field now that it is finally coming out of the image of the occult."

Three days of workshops and meetings cost $20. The meetings and a Saturday night banquet cost $35. Admission for a single day's program is $10. For additional information, persons may call Mrs. Schaefer at 398-2439.

Bill to check nuclear power urged

Support for state legislation to evaluate safety, health and environmental aspects of the nuclear power industry in Illinois has been announced by the Pollution & Environmental Problems, Inc., Palatine.

Local PEP members joined nine citizen groups in support of the Illinois Nuclear Evaluation Act, introduced by State Rep. Richard Mugalian, D-Palatine. The bill. H.B. 764, calls for a five-year moratorium on construction of nuclear power facilities in Illinois, pending the findings of an 11-member committee.

An April 26 hearing on the bill is scheduled before the House environment, energy and natural resources committee. Organizations, in addition to PEP which have announced support of the bill are Illinois Friends Committee on Legislation, McHenry County Defenders, Chicago Chapter of Friends of the Earth, Great Lakes Chapter of the Sierra Club, Illinois Public Affairs Committee of the National Council of Jewish Women, Chicago Women for Peace, Illinois Environmental Council and Waukegan Citizens Action Project.

Clothing needed for flood victims

Persons wishing to donate clothing and rags to residents of southwest Virginia hit by floods last week may drop them off with Jerry Hetrick, 602 W. Hackberry, Arlington Heights.

A truck donated by Brunswick Corp. will take the items Thursday, April 21.

For more information, call 398-1165.

RTA developing program for bus, train safety

The Regional Transportation Authority is taking steps to develop a regionwide safety program that would prevent accidents like the Feb. 4 "L" crash that killed 11 people.

RTA Chief Operating Officer Leo Cusick Wednesday said the agency plans to hire a safety expert experienced in both the equipment and operations side of the transportation business.

Cusick said the expert's job will be "to formulate a program which we can give to all of the agencies which we fund."

THE NEW SAFETY program is not a result of the February "L" crash, according to Cusick. He said efforts to develop rules and regulations for the railroads and rapid transit lines began about a year ago.

"We were going this way long before the thing happened," Cusick said.

The chief operating officer said the existing operating rules and regulations are not unsafe. "They have to be standardized more than rewritten," he said.

Eventually the safety program will extend to the bus lines, and will include use of materials on buses and rapid transit cars.

Cusick said the safety expert will not be looking back at the "L" crash, since that is being studied by the National Transportation Safety Board.

"He will not go back," he said.

Rank well in RTA 5-year program

Suburbs benefit in transit plan

by LYNN ASINOF

The Northwest suburbs will rank well in future transportation planning because of the area's hospitals, railroads, shopping centers and colleges.

The RTA's five-year report identifies the following areas as those that meet service guidelines but are currently without service:

- Chicago and North Western Ry. train stations at Arlington Park, Palatine and Barrington.
- Milwaukee Road train stations at Itasca and Hanover Park.
- Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights.
- Forest Hospital, Des Plaines.
- Alexian Brothers Hospital, Elk Grove Village.
- Barrington Square Mall, Hoffman Estates.
- Harper College, Palatine.

RTA director of planning Joanne Vlecides said identification of these areas does not mean that they are guaranteed service in the next five years. "Guidelines are not meant to be infallible or immoveable," she said.

The guidelines emphasize the need for feeder service to railroads, routes in high density population areas and regional routes that tie communities together.

CURRENT PLANNING, however, calls for service to be provided to all of these areas in one form or another by 1982. Over the five-year period, 75 routes will be started in the suburbs with 35 going into effect in fiscal 1978.

Other areas given priority in RTA planning are employment centers with a minimum of 500 employes per quarter square mile. This includes the Elk Grove Village industrial centers as well as many central business districts in the Northwest suburbs.

Specific routes will be announced in the yearly RTA plan. Seven new routes are planned for the Northwest suburbs in fiscal 1978. They include:

- Feeder service from Elk Grove Village to the Milwaukee Road train station in Bensenville.
- Midday and Saturday service in Wheeling.
- Feeder service from Rolling Meadows and Palatine to the Palatine train station.
- Service to Harper College.
- Expansion of the Buffalo Grove bus service.

A seventh route already approved by the RTA board will run between downtown Des Plaines and Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg. It is scheduled to begin in June.

RTA to have hearings on 5-year plan in May

The Regional Transportation Authority board has called for public hearings on a five-year plan that apparently pleases no one.

Suburban board members are unhappy with the $1.6 billion plan, saying it does not include enough new suburban bus service.

Several city members praised the staff for their efforts to prepare an accurate report. They said, however, they are uncomfortable with the fact that the program will cost $193.8 million more than the agency expects to have by 1982.

BOARD MEMBER James Kemp of Chicago asked that the agency present three alternative proposals at the public hearings, scheduled to start in May. He said the public should know what kind of service the agency can provide given current finances, with a 5 per cent gas tax or with a 1 per cent sales tax.

Kemp said he wanted the public to be fully aware of the options.

Board member D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston said the plan does not include enough new service for the suburbs.

Chief operating officer Leo Cusick warned that it takes time to develop suburban service.

"WE DO KNOW the 35 routes we are putting in (in 1978) are going to be stretching our capabilities. That is almost one a week and you just don't do it that fast if you are going to do it well," he said.

The suburban area will get only a fraction of the total amount allocated in the five-year plan. Capital investments for the suburbs total $88.9 million compared with $691 million for the Chicago Transit Authority.

Estimated cost for current suburban service over the next five years is $91.8 million with an additional $1.6 million expansion program proposed. The CTA operating costs over the same period are more than $1 billion.

Errors can be taxing problem

Income tax returns should be checked for errors, the Internal Revenue Servicie advises taxpayers.

Errors delay processing and refunds. Mistakes in arithmetic, the use of the wrong column in the tax table or schedule, failure to sign the return or attack all the necessary documents are some of the more common errors.

The use of the coded envelope and peel-off label provided with the tax forms mailed to taxpayers also will minimize errors, the IRS said.

The way we see it

Unit vote issues remain

Two important comments remain to be made in the wake of the overwhelming defeat of the unit school district proposal in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59.

• Officials in Dist. 59, and the newly elected members of the district board, have the responsibility to take positive steps to restore public confidence.

• As State School Supt. Joseph Cronin said following the vote: School district reorganization ought to occur in this area and it is the duty of school leaders to recognize that fact.

The issue of public confidence in Dist. 59 is pressing. For years, proponents and opponents of unit districts in this area have said — as a matter of faith — that voters would approve any unit district presented to them that provided any tax break, no matter how small.

But when the issue was presented to Dist. 59 voters, they turned down the prospect of a short term tax cut in favor of maintaining the status quo. And the reasons for that action are clear.

Many voters simply did not believe that Dist. 59 officials could manage an enlarged district based upon a poor record of financial management of their own.

To compound the fiscal problems, Dist. 59 students scored lower than any other Northwest suburban elementary students on high school preparatory exams — a situation parents of those students could not have been pleased with.

As they defeated the unit district, voters in Dist. 59 elected a slate of school board candidates pledged to fiscal responsibility and educational quality. These candidates will have to make difficult, perhaps unpopular, decisions in order to fulfill their pledges on the budget and to restore accountability to the educational system.

Throughout the area, the subject of school district reorganization should not be allowed to die. Cronin this week logically suggested that High School Dist. 214 should take the lead next fall in studying the alternatives for the area.

These alternatives could take the form of splitting 214 up into unit districts or they could involve simply redrawing elementary school boundaries in order to aid the small, impoverished districts that exist in the area.

There are more efficient and equitable ways for schools to be organized in this area. Administrative overhead could be cut and tax bases improved with sensible reorganization plans.

The development of such plans ought to be high on the list of priorities for local school officials.

Carter's straight talk on controlling arms race

Paul Greenberg

The issue of human rights, Jimmy Carter says, "is important for itself. It should not block progress on other important matters affecting the security and well being of our people and of world peace."

But the Soviet Union's Andrei Gromyko explained the breakdown of the arms talks at Moscow this way: "I shall not say that with every aspect of the arms talks we spoke about rights. But in fact everything that is being said about human rights in the United States . . . poisons the atmosphere, worsens the political climate."

While one's best instincts, and long experience, rebel at agreeing with Comrade Gromyko about anything from nuclear disarmament to "Good Morning," he might have the better of this argument. That well known linkage between arms control and human rights exists, if only because one side thinks it does. If the Soviets adjust their views on arms by the strength or weakness of American statements on human rights, they will have forged the link.

BUT LET'S NOTE that it is Carter who has talked straight about the last disarmament agreement reached with the Soviets at Vladivostok in 1974 and which now controls (or rather doesn't control) the arms race between the two superpowers. The new President summed up the Vladivostok agreement, in which his predecessor took so much pride, as "the ground rules for intensified competition and continued massive arms growth in nuclear weapons."

The development of both Soviet and American arms programs since 1974 bears out Carter's description. Vladivostok invited both countries to build up to nuclear parity. The United States, for example, was allowed to add 10 Trident submarines, carrying some 240 ballistic missiles and 1,920 nuclear warheads, and this was called arms control. Valdivostok's ceilings on now old-fashioned bombers and missiles spurred the competition for more and more sophisticated systems to deliver nuclear warheads. The American Cruise missile and the Russian mobile, land-based missile were natural consequences of Vladivostok.

Jimmy Carter proposed to break this dangerous pattern. Instead of accelerating the competition in delivery systems, he suggested that the United States and the Soviet Union begin trading off new weapons systems before they were fully developed or deployed. The American B-1 bomber, say, might be given up in exchange for the Soviets foregoing their Backfire. American development of the M-X missile might be halted if the Russians would cut back on their superior array of land-based missiles. If that meant the Russians would have to give up actual missiles for American blueprints, it would also give the Russians research time to catch up with American technology in weapons.

THAT THE RUSSIANS have more land-based missiles to give up indicates the strides toward strategic superiority that the Soviet Union was allowed under the last arms treaty and the Vladivostok agreement. Ideally, the advantages of this new approach would balance out, and the superpowers would begin destroying or preventing weapons systems rather than building them.

The idea is highly attractive in the abstract. It's a lot cheaper to pass up immensely costly weapons systems by mutual agreement than having to develop and deploy the things before agreeing to ban them. See the expensive history of anti-ballistic missiles. The President's proposal might be irresistible if only the arms tangle it sets out to break were not intertwined with another tangle: Human Rights.

President Carter may say, he may even think, that there need be no linkage between ideology and arms. But to the Soviets, who have more reason to fear American ideas than American arms, those two concerns may seem inseparable. One transmitter for the Voice of America may disturb the Kremlin more than a squadron of B-1s. If some way could be found to shush these deeply subversive ideas about freedom and democracy, the Soviets might not feel the need for all those missiles.

PERHAPS WHEN LEONID Brezhnev says that Detente will not slow Communist propaganda, as he repeatedly has said, no one in America may care. As a domestic ideology, Communism is simply of no great consequence to American society. But the Soviet leadership is scarcely that secure. It breaks into bluster every time a word of criticism is voiced. What it lacks in popularity at home, it seeks to make up for in armed force. If Americans will not rein in their ideas, the Soviets may not feel safe agreeing to new arms limits, particularly in light of the strides they have made under the old ones.

Eventually Jimmy Carter may sense a connection between obtaining a new arms agreements with the Soviets and never saying an encouraging word about the rights of man. Henry Kissinger did. And the Soviets doubtless would like to force this new Administration into making the same choice.

But if Carter may be confused for the moment about the linkage between arms and ideas, there are a lot of things worse than confusion. If the Soviets were to succeed in perpetuating the trend furthered by the Ford (or rather the Kissinger) Administration, then the future could bring both an intensified arms race and a further demoralization for the forces of freedom in the world.

That trend favored neither peace nor human rights. That's why the current impasse in the arms talks leaves the United States, the West and the peace of the world just a little safer. It's nothing to shed tears over.

Our picks in 3 park, 2 library votes

Next Tuesday, voters in five local park and library districts will vote in contested elections. Following are our endorsements in those races:

Salt Creek park

In recent weeks the Salt Creek Park Board has emerged from the obscurity that usually hides park districts of its size and has become involved in controversy.

The board ousted its park director with one day's notice and then reacted stubbornly and unresponsively when the public questioned the action.

The behavior of the park board during that period has become a prime issue in the campaign for one six-year term and one two-year term on the board.

For the six year term, we endorse SIEGMAR OLAF SCHNEIDER, an engineer who has been an active member of the community. Schneider kept calm during the controversy, even while criticizing the board. He called for an end to park commissioners receiving free use of park district facilities.

For the two-year term, we endorse MARY ANN HEIBERGER, a write-in candidate who is running against one-month incumbent John Ungerman. Mrs. Heiberger has experience with park districts as a former recreation supervisor in Rolling Meadows and will hopefully bring needed openness to the board.

Palatine park

Voters in the Palatine Park District Tuesday will elect two commissioners from a field of four.

We urge residents to cast their ballot for newcomers KAREN GIBBONS and DONALD HADDOCK. Both have been attending park district meetings and are knowledgeable on issues facing the district.

Haddock is active in the Palatine Celtics Soccer Assn. and favors development of soccer fields at the Old Palatine High School in addition to expanded teen programs.

Mrs. Gibbons also favors preserving the old Palatine High School for recreational use and would like to see expanded use of the golf course during the winter months.

We cannot endorse incumbent Thomas Patten because of his poor attendance record at board meetings. His absence has often forced the delay of important park board decisions.

Elk Grove library

Voters in Elk Grove Village have just one race for the village library board. Two candidates are vying for a two-year term on the board.

In this race, we endorse incumbent RONALD SATZKE. Satzke was appointed to the board last December. He has advocated later hours for the library and wants to make it more accessible to the handicapped and senior citizens.

In his few months on the board, Satzke has developed some knowledge of library operations. He should be given a chance to put this knowledge to work.

Mount Prospect library

The only contested race for the Mount Prospect Library Board is between three candidates for a two-year term.

In this race, we endorse write-in candidate ANTON DVYLIS.

Dvylis, 84, is running out of a belief that senior citizens should have greater participation in government. A long-time follower of the library — and the controversy surrounding it — he has called for financial responsibility and increased library sponsorship of programs in their new building.

Although some might consider Dvylis's age a handicap, he is certainly spry, intelligent and appears capable of handling the two-year term.

Des Plaines park

Four candidates are running for a two-year term on the Des Plaines Park Board.

We endorse A. DANIEL MESENBRINK, principal of Central School in Des Plaines for the post.

Mesenbrink has long been an active member of the community. He has served on the city's human relations and bicentennial commissions. As an educator who understands the problems of youth, he can provide a valuable voice on the park board.

Daniel Dowd, a law student and son of the township supervisor James Dowd, is also a well-qualified candidate. We encourage him to continue his interest and participation in local government.

Berry's world

"PSST! Have all the college kids gone back north yet?"

Comment on local election campaigns

Wednesday night, March 23, I attended a rally for the seven Des Plaines mayoral candidates at West School. When the meeting was open for questions from the audience, I made a comment concerning a statement implied at that forum by our acting mayor, then I asked him a three point question. It is to these two issues that I address myself at this time.

I was shocked when our mayor implied that the qualification of a mayoral candidate is that he or she must first have served as an alderman, and I said so to the Mayor and the audience in attendance. Then I asked the Mayor: 1) Why was a special hotline phone installed in his office, 2) Who paid for its installation, 3) Is it still in operation? The mayor's answers from the stage were delivered in a straight forward manner: 1) He used the phone for personal business, but only infrequently, 2) He personally paid for its installation, and 3) He has had the phone removed.

Following the meeting when I attempted to discuss these matters further with the mayor, he twice accused me of being a "plant" for an opposing candidate, and said if I wanted answers to these questions why didn't I call him at his office rather than ask him at this public gathering.

It's about time that the people, we who are paying our taxes to have the city run in the most efficient manner, receive answers to their questions without being accused of being "plants." Must we all agree with everything that is done by our elected officials? Should a citizen be muzzled for asking questions or expressing opinions? I believe the answer to both of these questions is, No. Mr. Truman once said, "If you can't stand the heat, you should get out of the kitchen."

A person serving in an elective office should not have to appeal to the voters only at election time. If he or she is fulfilling the duties of the office, we will justifiably return him to office.

Above all, don't condemn us if we ask questions, or don't always agree with everything you say or do, because after all, We are the People!

I HAVE APPEARED before the village board of Mount Prospect many times in the last five years and most recently on April 5. I have always appreciated the opportunity afforded the residents to be heard. However, neither I nor any other resident should have to be subject to an egotistic soliloquy by the mayor. His apparent delight in ridiculing residents that speak before the board does a disservice to the position he holds. However, residents will have the last word on April 19.

Worthy of note

The Wheeling Park Board wishes to express its appreciation to the electorate for the large plurality it gave the park district (4 to 1) to purchase the open space and facilities accompanying the Chevy Chase Country Club and the Childerley Retreat site.

Eighteen hundred and fifty two residents voiced their opinion and of that amount approximately 1,445 citizens said YES.

To those people who were supportive of the referendum, thank you!

To those residents who opposed the issues, thank you for voicing your opinion and taking the time to exercise your right to vote.

Better job, more secure future are benefits of college education

Attending college still pays off, according to a report released Wednesday by the Conference Board.

The New York-based business organization said an analysis by researcher Leonard Lecht shows that college graduates benefit from higher employment rates, improved earnings and future job prospects.

College graduates are much less susceptible to unemployment than any other group in the labor force, Lecht said. Between 1974 and 1975, for example, blue collar employment dropped 1.8 million while employment in technical and professional fields rose by more than 400,000 jobs. Three-fifths of all college graduates have technical and professional jobs.

INCOMES OF college educated people tend to increase at a faster pace and to higher levels than incomes of persons with only a high school education, the report said. In 1974, male college graduates over 25 made 36 per cent more money than high school graduates, a $4,500 difference.

For male university graduates between the ages of 25 and 34, the income edge compared to high school graduates is an average $2,200 per year. The income gap between high school and college graduates has narrowed less for women, the report said.

Future prospects for college graduates will remain bright during the next 10 years, according to the Conference Board report. Among the factors contributing to this trend are:

- Fewer young people entering the job market in the next decade, because of a decline in the U.S. birth rate. The number of Americans aged 14 to 24 will drop by two-thirds during the 1970s and another 3 million between 1980 and 1985.
- The slowdown of growth in college enrollment. After a jump of more than 100 per cent between 1960 and 1970, it rose 19 per cent between 1970 and 1974, and then rose more rapidly in 1975.
- College graduates entering a broader range of occupations than in the past. Between 1974 and 1985, new job openings will include physician's assistant, legal paraprofessional and specialized management jobs.
- Professional and technical employment is expected to increase at a faster pace than over-all employment. For the 1974 to 1985 period, employment will rise 29.5 per cent in technical and professional jobs compared to an over-all 20 per cent average. Jobs in teaching will continue to be scarce, the report said.

Honesty growing in annual reports

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — The typical corporation annual report may not qualify precisely for the fiction department — we have laws to prevent that — but on the other hand it isn't the country's foremost example of hardnosed, balanced reporting, either.

Amid gorgeous color photographs and dazzling graphics, the typical report aims at convincing stockholders that their company is brilliantly managed, enormously solvent and on the brink of achievements that will astound the financial world. If the stockbroker has some difficulty in correlating that impression with what actually has been happening to his stock lately, that traditionally has been his hard luck.

In response to growing skepticism about the value of most of these expensive wastebasket-stuffers, some major corporations have begun to try something new: telling it a little more like it is.

NO LONGER IS it always necessary to read every quarter inch of the myopia-inducing footnotes in order to discover that not everybody is persuaded that your firm is God's gift to finance, industry and the general welfare. Instead of just telling shareowners what it would like them to hear, many companies are devoting annual-report space to the views of dissidents and the questions of dissatisfied stockholders.

The result is twofold: not just more useful and credible information for curious stockholders, but a very much move lively and readable publication.

Some examples from the current crop of annual reports for 1976:

The Cyclops Corp. highlights a no-holds-barred luncheon conversation with shareowners about the accomplishments and shortcomings of the firm. Marcor includes a frank discussion between management and graduate students at Duke University. Mutual of Omaha features quotations from its policyholders, while several corporations—including Burlington Industries, Damon Corp. and Eli Lilly and Co. — give employes a chance to speak out about their jobs.

KOPPERS CO. takes a broader issue: "Some questions (and possible answers) about capital and capital formation." And Cincinnati Milacron wades right into some of the toughest questions it gets from stockholders and the investment community.

The technique is most effective when it delivers as many barbs as bouquets to the company. The report of Cyclops, a maker of steel and fabricated products, offers some sharp examples from the conversation with shareowners.

John B. Gundlach, of Belleville, Ill., is quoted as demanding a straightforward projection of the earnings outlook and inquiring acerbically "what happened to those rosy projections for steel earnings in 1976?" William H. Knoell, Cyclops' president, blamed "inventory liquidations" and the failure of capital spending to "take off as expected" as reasons the earlier predictions went sour.

A Ridgewood, N.J., homemaker, Mrs. Virginia E. Sauser, complained the company had not hired women engineers and needed a woman on its board of directors. Knoell: The company is actively looking for qualified women in all fields but finds professionals in short — and expensive — supply, because so many companies suddenly are seeking to hire them.

ANOTHER STOCKHOLDER, Leroy E. Degler, of Sinking Spring, Pa., voiced a familiar beef when he asked for an increase in the dividend payout; "I was really expecting more" than last year's 10-cent year-end extra, he said. Knoell avoided a promise to raise the regular quarterly rate just yet.

These techniques do not represent the millenium in corporate honesty — even Cyclops' report included, along with the complaints, some excessive puffery — but they do represent a healthy trend that recognizes both the increasing sophistication of stockholders and the cruel disappointments so many of them have undergone in the last decade.

Among those who have applauded this movement toward more meaningful "corporate democracy" in annual reports are those veteran gadflies and stockholder champions, Lewis D. and John J. Gilbert. And more and more managements are finding the latest fashion in corporate persuasion gets back to a very old idea: Honesty is the best policy.

Workers protest clothing imports

by United Press International

An estimated 500,000 clothing and textile workers staged a brief walkout Wednesday and joined coast-to-coast rallies demanding President Carter's support for tighter limits on apparel imports.

AFL-CIO President George Meany promised to carry the workers' message directly to Carter during a meeting in the Oval Office. Big labor also wants curbs on shoe and television imports — something Carter has resisted as protectionist.

Thousands of sewing machines and looms were idled when members of the nation's two biggest clothing and textile unions joined numerous rallies in 40 states, from New York's Herald Square o the steps of Los Angeles City Hall.

The walkout, which varied in length from several hours to a full day in different cities, was designed to point up the effect of import competition on American jobs. Employment in the domestic industry has fallen 30 per cent since 1968.

The Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers and the International Ladies Garment Workers unions insisted Carter must negotiate strict limits on apparel imports from countries where workers earn as little as 18 cents an hour.

The unions said they would "stand up and fight now" before their industry suffers as severely as domestic shoe and television manufacturers, who claim they are being wiped out by Carter's free trade policy.

Business briefs

Longshoremen threaten to strike

Shippers along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts braced for a strike Thursday by more than 30,000 longshoremen trying to win compensation for loss of job guarantees in handling cargo in containers. The International Longshoremen's Assn. threatened to pull all container cargo handlers off the piers at 12:01 a.m. today in a strike that could cripple shipments from Maine to Texas. The targets of the strike are the seven shippers handling all container cargo in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, Baltimore and Norfolk, and will include many ports along the Gulf of Mexico where these shippers — among the largest in the nation — operate. Among the ILA's demands were an increase of the hourly wage from $8 to $10 and a shortening of the work week from 40 to 32 hours. Shippers said the union's demands were far greater than the union's containerization losses and offered instead to increase management's pension, health and welfare contributions.

No wage-price rules: Blumenthal

Treasury Sec. Michael Blumenthal said Wednesday the administration's anti-inflation plan will have no wage-price guidelines or other coercive measures. The package President Carter will announce Friday is "not shock medicine," Blumenthal said. He said the worst inflation rate in the past 40 years did not result from a single cause and cannot be cured by concentrating on a single problem. Inflation will be curbed only through years of controlled federal spending, reduced government regulation, good weather and voluntary restraint in wage and price increases, Blumenthal said. On other matters, Blumenthal said:

- The economic recovery can be sustained for another three years.
- Carter's proposed $50 income tax rebate is needed despite strong recent gains in retail sales because unemployment is still very high, manufacturing capacity is low and plant and equipment spending is weak.
- Business is restraining capital investment more because of economic uncertainties than because of the so-called concern over the inflationary impact of $50 rebates.
- Basic tax reform including simplified returns for individuals and production incentives for business will be sent to Congress by late summer.
- Carter's energy proposals to be announced April 20 involve "hard decisions . . . that will not be popular."

Truth-in-ice cream labels ordered

Get ready for peach ice cream, peach-flavored ice cream and artificial peach ice cream. The Food and Drug Administration this week issued new labeling rules to help consumers know just what they're buying when they shop for ice cream. The agency also recommended, but did not order, that ice cream makers let the public know when food dyes or other artificial colors are used. Under the new rules, there could be three types of ice cream labels. For instance, peach ice cream without artificial flavoring would be called simply "peach ice cream." If an artificial flavor is added — but the ice cream is still more real than imitation — the label would read "peach flavored ice cream." But if the ice cream is more imitation than real, the label would read "artificial peach ice cream." As of next June 13, ice cream makers may begin using the labeling and as of July 1, 1979, the regulations will become mandatory. The rules also cover sherbet and water ices, and define the difference between ice cream and frozen custard.

Kelly to talk at accountants forum

He will discuss "Responsible Asset Management/Accounting for Fixed Assets." Kelly is business development manager for Marshall and Stevens, Inc., Chicago. The meeting will begin with dinner at 6 p.m. at Lake Shore Club, 850 N. Lake Shore Dr., Chicago.

Dow gains 1.02 in active trade

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, overcoming early profit taking and disappointment over IBM's earnings, rallied Wednesday for its fourth consecutive advance in active trading of New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly eight points early in the day, rallied to gain 1.02 points to 938.18, bringing its four-day advance to 23.45 points. It soared 13.06 points Tuesday in its best gain in six months.

Some afternoon buying was attributed in part to some short covering — replacing borrowed shares sold earlier at a higher price — in the blue-chip stocks.

But analysts and professional investors were impressed by the way the market absorbed early losses. Further, they were encouraged the market did not cave in when IBM reported first-quarter earnings only rose to $3.82 per share from $3.63 a year ago. IBM lost 5-3/8 to 273-3/8.

Chicago still 2nd in population despite moving

Chicago is still the nation's second largest city, but it is losing persons to suburban migration every year.

A U. S. government study released Wednesday shows that Chicago is among 14 of the nation's top 20 cities that lost population between 1970 and 1975.

Urbanologist Pierre deVise of the University of Illinois Circle Campus said his population estimates made in 1975 agree with the report. He said Chicago lost 399,000 persons over the five year period, averaging about 70,000 persons a year.

"About three-fourths of that migration is to the suburbs and one-fourth is beyond," deVise said.

THE REASON FOR the exodus is the attraction of new housing in the suburbs as the city faces growing crime and social problems.

"It is a pushing and a pulling effect," deVise said.

In the past year there have been indications that the migration is slowing as the number of whites in the city declines.

"Only half of the city is now Anglo-speaking whites. The relative numbers are just about the same, but the base keeps going down," deVise said, estimating that the migration is now down to 50,000 a year.

The census report shows that cities experiencing population growth are in the warmer climates. They include Honolulu, 12 per cent increase; San Diego, 11 per cent; San Antonio, 9 per cent, and Houston, 5.8 per cent. Other cities experiencing growth include Memphis and Phoenix.

The top eight cities according to population remained unchanged between 1970 and 1975. The largest is still New York, followed by Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Detroit, Houston, Baltimore and Dallas. San Diego is ranked as ninth largest with San Antonio tenth.

White House garden hard hit by winter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gardeners are laboring to save several trees and shrubs on the White House grounds, including an elm planted by John Quincy Adams, the chief horticulturist said Wednesday.

"It has been a trying spring for us," said Irwin Williams, who has been at the White House since 1949.

He said the harsh winter had taken an unusually heavy toll. "We've not had a real problem with winter damage in years," he said, listing holly, rhododendron, ivy and "many, many other shrubs" either killed by the cold or not expected to survive the spring.

"We're worried about that tree," Williams said, pointing toward a large elm planted by Adams in 1826. He said it was hit by lightning last summer and was damaged in a storm later in the year.

"We're keeping a close eye on it," he said, explaining the tree has become "weak" and susceptible "to just about anything, including Dutch elm disease."

Standing on the South Lawn, he looked at one of two Japanese maples planted by Mrs. Grover Cleveland. "That one is just about dead," he said of the barren tree.

Williams said it was not certain the winter weather alone was responsible for the empty branches.

the Big Bank out your way

A big bank isn't necessarily better than a little bank, but size says something about how our customers feel about us. Nine out of ten banks in the U.S.A. are smaller than Wheeling Bank. And no bank offers a greater range of basic services. For example, a free checking account requiring only a $50 minimum balance. Our customers tell us that makes sense.

We'll help you save, help you pay your bills, plan your retirement . . . your estate. Our people are your neighbors. They're friendly and dependable. You can count on them; you can count on us.

Sox flash power in 7-3 triumph over Red Sox

by BOB GALLAS

White Sox catcher Jim Essian was a little confused after he had stroked a third-inning home run in the Sox' 7-3 win over Boston Wednesday at Comiskey Park.

"I started to break into my home run trot," said the 25-year-old mustachioed receiver with a grin. "But then I remembered I didn't have one."

Essian's first major league homer gave the Sox a 1-0 lead, one they never relinquished as they later trotted out the heavy artillery to shell Red Sox starter Ferguson Jenkins. Bart Johnson, making his first start of the season, got the win for the South Siders who swept the two game series with the Red Sox.

RALPH GARR'S two-RBI triple in the fifth and Richie Zisk's three-run homer off the left field upper deck in the seventh provided the rest of the offense for the Sox who got a good game from just about everybody before a sparse crowd of 5,344.

Johnson went 6-2/3 strong innings before tiring in the seventh when he lost his shutout and gave up a run. But the 6-5 righthander looked sharp, striking out five and walking only one to impress manager Bob Lemon.

With Ken Brett, Chris Knapp and Steve Stone already in the starting rotation, and Wilbur Wood ready to come off the disabled list, Lemon will have at least one too many starters on his hands, a problem he relishes.

Johnson, whose last win was July 21 against Detroit, said his biggest problem so far this year has been trying to adjust to the suggestions of his third manager — and third pitching coach — in the past three years.

"I'm trying to incorporate things they've told me this year with some of the other things that worked well in the past," said Johnson, who was 9-16 last year. "Stan (Williams, Sox pitching coach) has been working with me, trying to get me to use my body more."

Johnson also used his imagination a little to keep his concentration.

"I've been having trouble pitching to righthanders," he said. "So every time a righthanded hitter came up today I just made believe I was pitching to (Carl) Yastrzemski." It worked well against everyone except Yastrzemski (who was 2-for-3 against Johnson.)

ZISK'S THREE-RUN homer was his second of the year and came after he had clubbed three healthy fly-outs in his first three trips to the plate. Zisk is now hitting .368 in the first five games of the season, going 7-for-19.

"I feel it's my job to drive in runs," he said. "They've got me batting fourth and that's the power position. The last time up Jenkins got the ball out over the middle and I just reacted naturally."

Zisk's blast could have been a grand slam if Bosox manager Don Zimmer had his way on a mound visit to Jenkins.

"I asked Fergie if he wanted to walk (Jorge) Orta and pitch to Zisk, and he said he wanted to go ahead and pitch to Orta outside to try for the ground ball," Zimmer explained.

Jenkins got the left-handed Orta to foul out, but didn't have any success with Zisk, whose blast gave the Sox a more comfortable 7-1 lead.

"WE THREW OUTSIDE to Orta and got him, but then it backfired," said Jenkins, now 0-1 on the year. "I threw a slider to Zisk low and away but it wound up in the seats." Jenkins then got Jim Spencer to ground out to end the inning and Jim Willoughby pitched the eighth for the Red Sox.

Dave Hamilton came on in relief of Johnson with runners at second and third. Hamilton threw one pitch to get out of the inning, then ran into trouble in the eighth, when the Red Sox got a pair of runs. Hamilton loaded the bases and Lemon brought on Lerrin LaGrow.

LaGrow let in a run on a fielder's choice, then a base hit by Dwight Evans, before striking out Butch Hobson to end the inning.

Both Garr and Eric Soderholm kept their hitting streaks alive Tuesday. Both have hit safely in all five games this season. Garr, in addition to his triple, also singled in five trips and is hitting .391 with seven hits in 23 trips. Soderholm tripled and doubled in four trips and is hitting .350 with 7-for-20.

THE SOX ARE now 3-2 while the Red Sox are 0-4. After a day off today, the Sox host Toronto Friday night in a 7:30 game.

SOX SLUGGER Richie Zisk goes after a pitch in Wednesday's win over Boston at Comiskey Park. Zisk hit a three-run homer off the left field upper deck in the seventh inning to pace the Sox triumph. The Sox, off today, host Toronto Friday.

Cub pitchers keep Phillies winless

From Herald Wire Services

Philadelphia — Right-handers Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter combined on a five-hitter and George Mitterwald belted a solo homer Wednesday to pace the Cubs to a 3-1 victory over the winless Philadelphia Phillies.

The loss was the fourth straight for the Phillies who are off to their worst start since 1969, but still favored to win their division.

Randy Lerch, making his first major league start, was locked in a scoreless duel with Burris into the seventh inning when the Cubs scored twice on three hits.

MITTERWALD LED off the seventh by hitting Lerch's first pitch over the leftfield wall for a homer.

Two outs later, Ivan DeJesus beat out an infield grounder and scored on Jose Cardenal's double.

The Cubs added a third run in the eighth on three straight singles and Bobby Murcer's sacrifice fly.

A two-base error by Steve Ontiveros and Jay Johnstone's single produced the lone Phillies' run in the seventh.

WHILE THE PHILLIES continue to struggle and draw the wrath of their fans who are one of the most vocal groups in the majors, the Cubs have conquered the .500 mark at 3-2 and are just one game behind division-leading St. Louis.

The Cubs have a day off today, but resume action Friday afternoon in New York.

The Mets were defeated by the Cardinals, 7-3 Wednesday while Pittsburgh blanked Montreal, 3-0 and Houston topped Cincinnati, 7-6. Atlanta was scheduled at Los Angeles and San Francisco at San Diego.

The Pittsburgh Pirates posted their second victory of the season Wednesday, as Bruce Kison pitched nine sparkling innings to defeat the Montreal Expos 3-0.

KISON ALLOWED just two hits, while striking out nine, to even his record at 1-1. He gave up a lead-off single to Dave Cash in the first, but allowed only two base runners the rest of the way — Ellis Valentine on a base on balls and Gary Carter on a base hit.

Steve Rogers, who went all the way in a losing effort, received less help from his teammates defensively than he did offensively. The Expos committed five errors and all three of the Pirates' runs were unearned. Bill Robinson, Rennie Stennett and Dave Parker drove in the runs for Pittsburgh.

The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Mets 7-3, as Ted Simmons and Keith Hernandez each hit two-run home runs. It was Hernandez' third homer of the season. Joe Torre homered for the Mets.

John Denny won it, increasing his record to 2-0, with help from Clay Carroll. Craig Swann was the starter and loser.

WILLIE CRAWFORD'S two-out single in the bottom of the ninth inning drove in the winning run from second base as the Houston Astros downed the Cincinnati Reds 7-6 to sweep their three-game series.

Jose Cruz started the Astros' rally with a two-out double off losing Reds' reliever Pedro Borbon, 0-1. Borbon then walked Bob Watson before Crawford rolled a slow ground ball over the bag at second.

Ken Forsch, who faced three Cincinnati batters in the ninth, earned his second victory of the season without a loss. All three Houston wins were by one run.

Final inning settles Bison win, Mustang loss

The two teams picked to win divisional races launched their Mid-Suburban League baseball seasons Wednesday. Both were involved in one-run affairs but any similarity ended there.

Two-time defending conference champion Rolling Meadows dropped a 3-2 verdict at Prospect while Buffalo Grove was winning at home, 4-3 over Fremd.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the circuit, Schaumburg racked up their second straight triumph, 5-4, at the expense of Conant while Forest View bounced back from an opening day loss with more firepower, and trounced Elk Grove, 11-4.

In North Division inaugurals Wheeling thumped Arlington, 9-2, and Palatine edged Hersey, 2-1.

Buffalo Grove was a unanimous pre-season pick to rule the North but evidently Fremd hadn't gotten the word. The Vikings battled the Bison to a standoff until the seventh when a pair of miscues set up the decisive play.

TIM PROKOF SUPPLIED the winning hit, and he was also credited with another key blow in the fifth. Mike Ledna put the hosts on the scoreboard initially with a two-run double to left center in the second and Prokof singled home Al Cymbal in the fifth.

In the top of the third Fremd picked up one run on Chris Pethley's base hit and the Vikes knotted the score at 3-3 when Ron Burke poled a two-run homer to right in the sixth.

Mid-Suburban baseball report

Prokof's winning single followed in the seventh after Mike Marshall had reached on one error and advanced on another. Phil Czosnyka, who relieved Marshall on the hill in the fifth inning, earned the win.

MEADOWS, THE pre-season favorite in the South, became the second victim of the Knights when Tom Peterson lined a hit to deep right in the bottom of the seventh.

The Mustangs had sailed into the seventh with a 2-1 lead behind the pitching of veteran Dennis Drolet but Paul Lundstedt kicked off the big Prospect rally with a single.

Brian DeValk then tripled home pinch runner Scott Springs to knot the score and bring up Peterson an out later. Jim McDonald went the distance on the mound for the hosts to earn the win.

FOREST VIEW SCORED 11 runs in their opener Monday and lost. The same number of tallies netted them a seven-run triumph Wednesday behind the five-hit pitching of Larry Dahl.

Randy Hansen's two-run circuit blow in the third and single by Phil Willis in the fourth coupled with an error allowed the Grenadiers to battle back into a 4-4 tie before the roof caved in. A two-run double by Ron Laramie opened the floodgates for the

Bears trade Huff to Tampa for draft picks

The Bears traded one-time starting quarterback Gary Huff to his hometown Tampa Bay Buccaneers Wednesday in exchange for undisclosed draft choices.

Huff, who played out his option with Chicago last season, signed a 1977 contract with the Bears earlier Wednesday before the trade was announced.

The 6-foot-1, 198-pound quarterback from Florida State was a second round draft pick in 1973. He had been touted as the signal caller needed to make a winner out of the Bears.

Huff completed 310 passes in 614 attempts for 3,271 yards and 12 touchdowns in three seasons but was displaced by Bob Avelini, a younger quarterback from Maryland.

Last year Huff's only job was holding for placekicker Bob Thomas. Huff is an accountant in Tampa Bay during the off-season.

"We wish Gary well with his new team," Bear General Manager Jim Finks said. "We're happy for him because we knew he wanted to play before his hometown fans."

Bees buzz to bother baseball

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (UPI) — A high school baseball game here was called on account of bees.

Bees swarmed the field right after the first pitch was thrown of the game between Fairfield and Vallejo's Hogan high schools.

One swarm collected on a spectator bench but another group buzzed to the backstop.

The bench was taken away and that swarm then joined the bees gathered behind home plate.

The umpires called off the contest after waiting for over an hour for the bees to buzz off.

Falcons in the final two innings of play.

RIGHTHANDER TIM McCue survived a seventh-inning scare and went on to pitch a five-hitter as Schaumburg hung on for a 5-4 victory over Conant Wednesday.

The Saxons gave McCue a 5-2 lead on a pair of unearned runs plus two solo homers by Rick Baker and a bases-empty shot by sophomore catcher Phil Cerrito.

McCue, who struck out 10 batters in going the distance, bailed out of a tough jam in the seventh after consecutive doubles by Jeff Johnson, Scott Schafer and Rob Totten cut the lead to 5-4 with nobody out.

Totten, who had homered earlier for both of Conant's runs, was first given credit for a home run that would have tied the score. But the umpires changed it to a ground-rule double, saying the ball bounced over or through the fence in center field.

A pinch runner for Totten was out trying to steal third, then McCue retired two Cougar pinch hitters to end the game.

WHEELING UNLEASHED a 13-hit attack that featured three home runs at the expense of Arlington and its pitching ace John Mertins for a 9-2 North Division victory Wednesday.

Benefiting from the output was Wheeling righthander Jim Passolt who handcuffed the Cards on just five hits, walking three and whiffing four.

As much as Passolt was helping the Wildcats with his arm, though, he wasn't exactly hurting them with his bat. The leadoff hitter reached base four times on three hits and uncorked a booming home run to centerfield with a teammate aboard.

Rick Heredia was next to face Mertins in Wheelings five-run fifth frame and he responded with another round-tripper. An inning earlier, John Skwarek drilled a two-run homer as one of his three hits on the day.

STARTING PITCHER Kevin McKenna fanned 12 batters and allowed just two hits Wednesday to lead the Palatine Pirates to a 2-1 win over the Hersey Huskies.

"He's an excellent pitcher," said Hersey coach Steve Chernicky. "He has a good assortment of pitches and he keeps the hitters off balance."

McKenna served a home run pitch to Hersey's Brian Hastings in the first inning and, except for a last-inning threat, that was all the offense the Huskies could muster.

Hersey threatened in the sixth when Hastings singled and Tom Isola walked. Both runners then advanced on a double steal but McKenna fanned the last batter to preserve the triumph.

Palatine was held scoreless by Todd Walker until the sixth inning when Dan McSweeney homered and Mike Mikulan singled to drive in Doug Buenzow, who had reached on an error and stole second. run with a homer in the second inning and the Dons got two more in the fifth to tie the score at 3-3.

Notre Dame home runs bump off St. Viator 5-4

Notre Dame edged St. Viator, 5-4, on Bill Weltlich's second home run of the game, a two-run shot off Gary Schrieber in the bottom of the seventh inning Wednesday.

It was a tough-luck loss for Schrieber, who allowed just six hits in going the distance. The defeat was the first for St. Viator in conference play after an opening win.

The Lions had taken a 4-3 lead on Notre Dame in the top of the seventh with an unearned run off eventual winner Jeff Poczatek. Dan Schwellenbach singled home the go-ahead run after Nick Baffa moved from first to third on Poczatek's wild pickoff throw.

St. Viator had scored once in the opening frame on a triple by Danny Faul and a sacrifice fly by Schwellenbach. The Lions added solo markers in the third and fourth innings on RBI singles by Baffa and designated hitter Chris Bobowski.

Oakland rookie responds to raise

Rookie Mitchell Page celebrated an $11,000 salary raise by driving in six runs with his first two major league homers and a double Wednesday as the "new" Oakland A's swept to their fifth victory in six games this season, a 9-3 decision over the California Angels.

Page, one of six players A's owner Charlie Finley obtained from Pittsburgh in a big spring trade, slugged a three-run homer in the third to put the A's in front 3-1 and added a solo shot in the seventh. His two-run double in the ninth then triggered a final three-run rally for Oakland.

The two hits gave Page 11 in his first 23 at-bats and he now has eight runs-batted-in. After Tuesday's game in which he had two doubles and a single, Page had his salary raised by Finley from the basic rookie pay of $19,000 to a reported $30,000.

DICK ALLEN, Rob Picciolo and Jerry Tabb had an RBI each as rookie Rick Langford, also picked up in the spring trade with Pittsburgh, went 5-2/3 innings to gain his first major league victory. Pablo Torrealba added 3-1/3 shutout innings of relief to gain his second save.

Three errors by Detroit shortstop Mark Wagner and rookie Doug Ault's third homer of the season keyed a four-run sixth inning in the Jays' victory over the Tigers.

Ault, the 27-year-old slugging first baseman, started the Blue Jays' sixth with a leadoff homer over the 330-foot sign in rightfield. Gary Lee Woods then reached first on a wild throw by Wagner, stole second and scored when Wagner missed the relay at second from catcher Milt May.

ONE OUT LATER. Steve Bowling reached first when, once again, Wagner uncorked a wild throw on his grounder to short. Alan Ashby singled and Al Woods walked to load the bases and another run scored on Tito Fuentes' wild throw to the plate on Bob Bailor's grounder to second.

The final Blue Jay run of the inning came across when Jim Crawford, who relieved loser Rudy Arroyo, issued a bases-loaded walk to Otto Velez.

In other American League games Wednesday, Toronto topped Detroit 7-6, Cleveland beat Texas 5-3 and New York whipped Kansas City, 5-3.

Bucky Dent, former White Sox, doubled off the leftfield wall to score Willie Randolph from first base in the eighth inning enabling the New York Yankees to snap a three-game losing streak with a 5-3 victory Wednesday night over the previously unbeaten Kansas City Royals.

Randolph stroked a two-out single to left and, running with the pitch, came all the way around to score on Dent's second hit of the game. Dent also knocked in Randolph with a single in the fourth.

Mickey Rivers, who had three hits, accounted for the other two New York runs. He led off the game with a single and scored on a single by Chris Chambliss. Rivers also singled in the sixth to drive in Graig Nettles. Thurman Munson scored on a wild pitch in the ninth by Steve Mingori.

Rick Manning scored three runs and Rico Carty drove in two runs to help Cleveland hand the Texas Rangers their first defeat of the year, 5-3, and keep the Indians atop the American League East.

Dennis Eckersley won his first game of the year and allowed only five hits through the first eight innings. But his bid for a shutout was ruined in the ninth by a three-run homer from Toby Harrah. He gave up eight hits in the game.

MANNING WALKED to start the first, moved to second on Duane Kuiper's single, advanced to third on a groundout and scored on Carty's ground ball. Ray Fosse singled in Bill Melton in the fourth and singles by Manning and Kuiper combined with a groundout by Jim Norris accounted for another run in the fifth.

Ashe heads tennis benefit match card

Arthur Ashe will play world-ranked Vijay Amritraj, and Ilana Kloss and Linky Boshoff, world number-one ranked women's doubles team, will square off against each other in a tennis benefit at DePaul University in Chicago May 7.

The two singles' matches will be followed by a mixed doubles' finale. The tennis will be played in Alumni Hall, 1011 W. Belden.

The tennis night is part of the Gerald Warren Memorial, with all proceeds going to Dr. Fritz Bach, director of Immunobiology and the director of a cancer research center at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

For further information call Mrs. Sally Warren Kaplin (433-4020).

Illinois Open heads list of PGA events

The grueling Illinois Open golf championship highlights this season's Illinois PGA list of 50 events. Scheduled to be played at Elgin Country Club August 8-9, the Open calls for 144 qualifiers to play 18 holes Monday and the low 50 playing 36 more holes Tuesday.

The Illinois PGA Stroke-play Championship will be held this year at Lincolnshire Country Club in Crete July 25-26. The Illinois champion will represent the state in the National PGA Championship at Pebble Beach Country Club August 11-14.

The tournament schedule kicks-off May 2 with the PGA's 18-hole Medal Play Tournament, hosted at Lake Shore Country Club in Glencoe.

LINDA FRATIANNE, newly crowned successor to Dorothy Hamill as the world's best amateur woman figure skater, will make a special appearance May 20-22 at the Randhurst Twin Ice Arena in Mount Prospect for the "Stars on Ice Revue."

Coming in May

Ice show adds extra session

Brisk early ticket sales for the Chicago Figure Skating Club's fourth annual "Stars on Ice Revue" on May 20, 21 and 22 at Randhurst Twin Ice Arena, Mount Prospect, have resulted in addition of a fifth performance at 6:30 on Sunday evening.

Previously announced performances of the much-acclaimed ice show are at 7:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Joseph L. Serafine, immediate past president of the not-for-profit Chicago Figure Skating Club and the Revue's General Chairman, indicated that sellouts were expected at all performances, duplicating last year's standing room only crowds. "This is a family show which has built a large following during the first three years, and our 1977 production should be the best yet," he said.

World, Olympic and U. S. National champions appearing include Linda Fratianne, Tai Babilohia and Randy Gardner, David Santee of Park Ridge, plus Michelle Ford and Glenn Patterson. Canadian Bronze Medalist Verne Taylor is also among the internationally prominent guest skaters.

More than 150 of the area's finest young amateur skaters will also appear in Cinderella and Space Odyssey production numbers, which feature original choreography, dazzling sets and colorful costumes.

Reserve seat tickets at $3.50, $4, and $5 for adults, with a dollar discount for children under 13, are on sale daily from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. at Randhurst Arena, located near Routes 12 and 83 in Mount Prospect. The Arena seats 2,800 persons.

Triangular produces top track and field efforts

It started out as a simple three-team track meet, but when it was finished there were three head coaches who were slack-jawed and just slightly agog.

"I've never seen better performances over-all in a dual meet," said Conant coach Ron Gummerson. "And it was only our second outdoor meet of the season."

Gummerson's team finished in third place with 51 points behind winner Maine West (72) and host Elk Grove (53). The scores weren't necessarily indicative of what happened Tuesday evening, though.

MAINE WEST sprinter Tony Krainik, second last year in the IHSA state finals of the 220, won three events including the 100 in 9.85 and the 440 in 50.25. Krainik also won the 220 in 22.9.

In the 100 and the 220, the Warrior dash ace edged Elk Grove's Pat O'Brien, who raced to his second straight 10.0 in the 100. Conant's Joe Grall was third in 10.2.

But O'Brien's specialty is the 120-high hurdles and the Grenadier senior wasn't disappointing. He literally flew over the hurdles in 14.1, the fastest clocking this area has seen in a long time.

"The wind was kind of a side wind and wasn't really a factor in any of the races," said Gummerson.

THE CONANT coach got some strong efforts from his own athletes, including Dave Janzow and Bob Holzkamp who broke school records in their specialties. Janzow popped a 6-4½ high jump and Holzkamp put the shot a distance of 53-8.

"It was just an incredible meet," Gummerson added. "The times amazed me but I suppose the nice weather was a big factor. We had a high jumper who went 6-0 who never did better than 5-8 before."

That would be junior Al Beamish.

Gummerson got excellent performances from low hurdler Sam Assil (39.6), pole vaulter Jeff Carter (13-6) and the mile relay team of Jerry Kleeman, Assil, Bill Baird and Grall, who won in 3:30.8, just missing another school mark.

ELK GROVE also got a strong performance from Scott Parker, who won the long jump (20-9¼) and the triple jump (41-9¼) with his best marks of the season.

Almost going unnoticed was the usual standout double by Maine West senior Jeff Brydges, who won the two-mile (9:53.9) and came back to run the area's fastest mile, a 4:23.1.

CROWDED CREASE. Los Angeles goalie Rogie Vachon has plenty of company in his cage Wednesday night and although Boston didn't score on this play, the Bruins peppered Vachon for a 6-2 Stanley Cup playoff win.

Chenier's 38 gives Bullets 109-100 win

LANDOVER, Md. — Phil Chenier shook off any vestiges of a late season shooting slump with a 38 point performance Wednesday night as the Washington Bullets rolled to a 109-100 opening game NBA playoff victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers. The Bullets, knocked out of last year's playoffs by the Cavaliers in the opening round, never trailed in gaining the edge in the best of three series.

Chenier scored 21 points in the first half, including five straight baskets to open the second period. Kevin Grevey got 12 of his 16 points in the first half as the Bullets built a 14 point margin at intermission. In the second half, Elvin Hayes, who went without a field goal for the first 26 minutes of the game, joined Chenier in the scoring parade and wound up with 21 points.

The game was officiated by Richie Powers, one of two veteran NBA officials who has refused to join the referees' strike, and Roger McCann, a stand-in recruit from the Eastern League.

Cleveland coach Bill Fitch was thrown out of the game by Powers in the third period for protesting a call by McCann. Fitch, enroute to the lockerroom, stopped and made a choke sign at the rookie ref. By that time, Fitch's team was 19 points behind. The Cavaliers wound up with four technicals for protesting calls by Powers and McCann.

Lafleur lifts Canadiens past Blues

MONTREAL—Guy Lafleur scored a goal on an assist as the Montreal Canadiens blanked the St. Louis Blues 3-0 and grabbed a 2-0 lead in their best of seven Stanley Cup quarterfinal series.

Lafleur, who equaled an NHL playoff record with six points in Monday night's game, has now picked up at least one point in eight straight playoff games dating to the 1976 semifinals against the New York Islanders. He set up the opening goal by Steve Shutt at 6:15 of the first period.

Bobby Schmautz, who had three goals in a first-game victory, scored twice Wednesday night to lead the Boston Bruins to a 6-2 win over the Los Angeles Kings and a 2-0 advantage. Terry O'Reilly, Jean Ratelle and Gregg Sheppard had a goal and an assist each. Stan Jonathan got Boston's first goal as the Bruins skated to their seventh straight victory dating to March 26.

Team Captain Clark Gillies scored his third consecutive game-winning goal midway through the final period to lift the New York Islanders to a 4-2 victory over the Buffalo Sabres and a 2-0 lead. The Islanders, who have now won all four of their NHL playoff games this season, had to fight back from a 2-0 deficit on second-period goals by Bob Bourne and Bryan Trottier after Buffalo had gotten first period goals from Don Luce and Rene Robert.

The Toronto Maple Leafs again jumped ahead with two early goals and went on to a 4-1 win over the Philadelphia Flyers, stunned earlier in the day when assistant coach Barry Ashbee was hospitalized with leukemia. The Leafs' second straight victory at the Spectrum gave them a 2-0 advantage in the playoffs.

Pimlico officials reach agreement

BALTIMORE — The Preakness may be held again at Pimlico, after all. A tentative agreement was reached late Wednesday between the management of three Maryland race tracks and negotiators for the track employes union that has been on strike since March 12, a union spokesman said.

Richard Eventoff, assistant to the president of Local 692 of the Retail Store Employes Union, said voting was scheduled Thursday on the pact with the management of Pimlico, Bowie and Laurel race courses.

Eventoff, who refused to release the terms of the proposed agreement, said racing at Pimlico may start again as early as Saturday if the 600 union members vote to ratify the proposed agreement.

Davis captures early bowling lead

TOLEDO, Ohio—Wendell Davis of Johnson City, Tenn., seeking his first Professional Bowlers Assn. title, averaged 239 a game Wednesday to take the lead after the first round of the $70,000 Toledo Open.

Davis held a 44-pin lead over sceecond place Norm Meyers of St. Louis, Mo., who averaged 232.

In three years on the PBA tour, Davis has never before led a tournament. He did Wednesday after scoring a six-game total of 1,436.

Ali will take on pair in exhibition

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Muhammad Ali, out of the ring since September when he defended his heavyweight championship, said Wednesday he will fight a six-round exhibition Saturday.

Ali said he would take on Jody Ballard and Michael Doakes for three rounds each at the Miami Beach Convention Center. The event, to be televised nationwide, will be on the Don King United States Boxing Championship card.

Ali, 35 and weighing 233 pounds, said he wanted the fight to prove "even though I'm in my over-the-hill time, I can make them (Ballard and Doakes) submit." Also appearing Saturday for an exhibition fight will be the world lightweight champion Estaban De Jesus.

Phil Wrigley: 'A good, fair man'

Milton Richman

NEW YORK (UPI) — Phil Wrigley had a habit of answering the phone himself because he always wanted to hear first-hand what the so-called man in the street had to say about his ball club, and on this particular day the guy on the other end was demanding action, not tomorrow or the day after, but right now.

He was watching one of the Cubs' pitchers taking his lumps over TV in a Chicago bar and from the sound of his voice, it was obvious he had drunk his lunch. It was immediately clear to Phil Wrigley, also watching the game on TV in his own downtown office, that the guy had more than merely two or three.

"For crisakes, Wrigley, when are you gonna get that hamburger outta there?" the caller started right in. "He's no pitcher. He's gettin' bombed out there, can't you see that for yourself?"

WRIGLEY, WITH his eyes on the tube, was about to answer, when Leo Durocher, then the Cubs' manager, came bouncing out of the dugout. Seconds later, he motioned to the bullpen for a change of pitchers.

The guy in the bar couldn't believe what he was seeing on the screen. "Thanks, Mr. Wrigley," he said, suddenly sobering. "That's what I call action."

Phil Wrigley, who owned the Chicago Cubs for so many years and died Tuesday at the age of 82, operated his club completely differently than any other man in baseball.

HE NEVER went to the ball park to see his team play, preferring to watch it on TV. That didn't mean he wasn't interested in the Cubs because he was, and vitally so.

He firmly believed baseball was a day game and should be played in the sunlight, so he was the only owner never to install lights in his ball park. He seldom spoke personally with any of his ball players, but he had a soft spot in his heart for all of them.

"Essentially, I think he was a shy man and that he always wanted to keep a low profile," says Don Kessinger, who played shortstop with the Cubs 11 years and now is with the Cardinals.

Speaking of his former employer before Tuesday's game with the Mets, Kessinger had this to say about Phil Wrigley:

"I'VE NEVER MET a fairer man than he was. I remember asking John Holland, the general manager, whether I could speak with Mr. Wrigley at the end of 1975 when I knew I was going to be traded. He said, 'sure, go ahead.' I spoke with him and thanked him for all his kindness to me through the years. He said he considered me a gentleman, which I took as a tremendous compliment, and then he told me I didn't have to be traded if I didn't want to be. But I told him it was probably time — for the organization and for me. Fellows who had been with him a long time, players like Ernie Banks, Billy Williams and Ron Santo, told me if you were fair with him, he'd be the same way with you, and that was how I found him. A good, fair man."

Blake Cullen, assistant to National League President Chub Feeney now, also was with the Cubs 11 years, first as road secretary and later as assistant general manager to John Holland. He shares Don Kessinger's feelings for Phil Wrigley.

"I liked him," says Cullen. "You never felt uncomfortable being around him. For all his accomplishments and his wealth, he wasn't one of those big God presences. Each year, a week or so after the season was over, he always made it a point to get together with his manager, his coaches, John Holland and myself, and he loved to tell baseball stories.'

"HIS FAVORITE one was about Hack Wilson when he played for the Cubs. Mr. Wrigley liked to tell about how Wilson, scraping the grass with his spikes in right field one day, suddenly looked up and began chasing what he thought was a line drive going over his head.

"Only it wasn't a ball he was chasing, it was a pigeon, and it flew right out of the ballpark. Charlie Grimm, playing first base that day, came charging out toward Wilson, wondering what in the world he was doing.

"That was the longest ball I ever seen hit!' Wilson said to Grimm, the way Mr. Wrigley told the story.

" 'Why, you foolish so-and-so, the pitcher hasn't even thrown the ball yet. That was no line drive, that was a pigeon you were chasing.' Mr. Wrigley said that was a true story."

More power ahead for Bob Kennedy

by ED SAINSBURY
UPI Sports Writer

The future of the Chicago Cubs undoubtedly depends upon decisions of William Wrigley III, who is expected to take charge of the baseball team even though he probably will not be the majority stockholder.

Wrigley, 44, has assumed increasing responsibility in operation of both the baseball team and the William Wrigley, Jr. Co. for the past 15 years. He is the only son of Philip K. Wrigley, who died Tuesday.

Tributes to the elder Wrigley came from nearly every major personality in baseball and other sports. Many of them were expected to attend his funeral.

Arrangements for the funeral were pending.

DURING THE 45 years he controlled the Cubs, the elder Wrigley received numerous offers to buy the team, including at least two from Ray Kroc, founder of MacDonald's hamburger chain who later bought the San Diego Padres.

He inherited control of the Cubs in 1932 from his father and said he would never sell the team because he expected his son to take control. But, he once said, his William "could sell it."

It was regarded as unlikely that young Wrigley would decide to sell the team, at least at the present, although he is certain to receive offers.

THE ELDER Wrigley's wealth was estimated at more than $100 million, and it was likely that William will be chosen to operate the baseball team with his two sisters receiving partial ownership. Other Wrigley financial interests probably will be divided more or less equally.

Wrigley's death also probably will place greater responsibility on Bob Kennedy, a former player who last winter was named vice president in charge of baseball operations. Kennedy was given virtually a free hand by Wrigley and his authority could be expanded under his son.

While his father rarely saw the Cubs in person, William Wrigley frequently has attended games at Wrigley Field and displayed interest in the team for many years. But his primary occupation has been with the gum company, thus indicating he would delegate greater authority about the Cubs to Kennedy.

WILLIAM, HOWEVER, was expected to retain the veto power of his father on major transactions, including sums expended in player contracts, that his father held.

Under Philip Wrigley's ownership the Cubs won four National League pennants, but never a world championship.

Wrigley was concerned more about the fans, who supported the team yearly despite its losing record. Although the club lost money financially, Wrigley authorized expenditure of millions to constantly modernize and improve facilities at Wrigley Field.

He was regarded as a "sportsman" whose concern was for the well being of baseball more than for victory, and in baseball circles he was considered a stabilizing factor never afraid to express his opinion on issues confronting the game.

Hascup, Fleck named to Fremd positions

Fremd High School principal Tom Howard this week named two new head coaches to the boys' athletic department, both times dipping into Dist. 211's vast reservoir of talent.

Roy Hascup, the acting cross-country coach for the final four weeks of the 1976 season, was selected to the head job in that sport, and John Fleck was named the Vikings' first swimming coach. Fleck, who has been teaching at Hoffman High School since September, had come to Dist. 211 after many successful years of coaching at St. Viator.

Hascup has been in the district for seven years, including the last five seasons at Fremd where he guided the lower-level cross-country programs to an overall record of 97-4 in dual meets. His freshman and sophomore teams have been conference champions for each of the past three years. He had been assistant coach at Schaumburg for two years prior to coming to Fremd.

BEFORE COMING TO the district, Hascup taught and coached at Paddock Junior High in Palatine where he began the running program.

Hascup became acting coach in September on the eve of the conference meet when nine-year veteran Ron Menely resigned unexpectedly.

FLECK FOR MANY years directed the highly successful swimming program at St. Viator, winning several conference titles during his stay there.

Howard, who has been the principal at Fremd since September, praised his two new coaches and stressed the importance of a strong athletic program.

"I take a great deal of personal interest in all sports," he said. "But, as I've said many times, I try to stress the three A's — academics, activities and athletics. If your school is strong in two of them, you have a good school. If you're strong in three, you have a great school. I think we are strong in all three."

Road trip

The agony of 12 days as a traveling man

Jim Murray

Travel, they say, is broadening. You learn things the stay-at-homes never learn.

Having just come back from a 12-day road trip, I'm here to testify it's so. Except the things you learn I'm not so sure you want to. They never cease to baffle me. I know they do happen. I don't know why.

For instance:

Why is the plane you're on always 55 minutes late — while the one you're connecting with is always right on time?

WHY IS THE GATE on the airplane you have 1½ minutes to catch always way out at the end of the terminal? Why isn't YOUR plane ever at Gate 1 or Gate 2? SOMEBODY must get flights at those inside gates. But did you ever meet anybody who did?

Why is it you never get to a hotel where you've had confirmed reservations for a month or so and they actually have heard of you? Why do they always have to launch a search of 20 minutes or so and then say, "Well, we can't find it, but here, we'll put you up in this room until the night manager comes back from his fishing trip?" And they escort you to a room that is obviously a converted lavatory.

Why is it, in a 300-room motel, you always get the one underneath the cutups of the convention who show up determined never to sleep?

Why is the ice-maker with the faulty fan right outside YOUR door?

WHY DO YOU always get the rental car that dies at intersections?

Why do people always give you directions like "Drive out past the old Nelson place and turn right by the old school" when you're 3000 miles from home and have never been there before?

Why do you get to airports on time for flights you booked months before to find your flight has been canceled as of the first of the month?

Why do motel TVs always give President Carter green hair, or look as if the late show was filmed through a blizzard?

WHY DO THE towns you find yourself stranded in always have movies like "The Creature from 12,000 B.C. Meets the Bride of Frankenstein" or ring the wrong room when your wife "Joe Panther"?

Why does the hotel operator always track you down to an island in the middle of a river with a call from a press agent for a dog show — and is trying to get you in an emergency?

Why is it everybody you meet on the road wants to tell you endless unfunny dirty jokes — if that's not redundant?

Why does the guy you sit next to on the plane always want to bore you with his diet or complain to the stewardess about someone smoking 11 rows away or show you pictures of his grandchildren or all three?

WHY DO PEOPLE say "You can't miss it" in giving directions, when there are 4,211 opportunities to "miss it," all of which you take? Why do they tell you to "go north" on a cloudy day or after dark in a strange state?

Why is it the persons you can't stand the most on a trip are always the ones who are going to be in California next month and promise to "look you up?"

Why do people think you're dying for a home-cooked meal on the road when what you're really dying for is lobster Newburg on the old expense account?

WHY DO PEOPLE always say, "You must go to so many exciting places!" when here you are in Ocala, Fla., or Louisville, Ky., or Augusta, Ga., or Indianapolis Ind., or Green Bay, Wis., when they say it to you? Also, why is the World Series always in New York? Why can't it be in Paris or Athens just once? What's wrong with Bermuda for the Super Bowl?

And, last but not least, what's so tough about staying home? I mean, what have you got against orange groves and sunshine and cars that start the first turn of the key and a room that is always ready at night and a TV that works and so does the shower, and the people in the next room aren't having an orgy or a husband-and-wife fight and the ice-maker is quiet, and don't get lost on your way home, and your laundry is always ready and your luggage will never get lost and you don't have a plane to catch or a drive to take or a desk clerk to cajole or a Coke machine to kick and no strangers to humor or ramps to climb and people to think your life is dull when you know in your secret heart what dullness really is — it's being lost on the Florida Turnpike at 2 in the morning, knowing your reservation is going to be sold out from under you.

No place for coach to park; game called

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Maryland-Georgetown baseball game was cancelled because Terps' Coach Jack Jackson couldn't find a place to park his car. And that's the truth.

The parking situation at Georgetown is so tight that it costs $1 to park on campus.

A school spokesman, Fran Connors, explained that word of Jackson's arrival didn't reach parking gate attendants soon enough.

So Jackson, after unsuccessfully trying to enter two lots, decided not to play the game after a tow truck driver tried to tow his car away.

"We were the visiting team, invited down there to play baseball, and I was not about to pay for parking," said Jackson. "It was the principle of the thing."

Georgetown Coach Tommy Nolan called the mixup a "breakdown in communications.

"I told Jack, who's a good friend of mine, that if I was in the same situation, I would have probably done the same thing," said Nolan.

Doubled out of trouble

West's double of five diamonds was most unfortunate. If he had just passed East would almost surely have gone to six clubs. That contract would go one down against a heart lead and would make against the lead of any other suit.

East might well have taken the double out, but he decided to trust his partner.

South decided that the doubler would have at least three diamonds and probably all four. He also counted an easy 11 tricks against a 3-1 trump break and a way to handle four trumps in the West hand provided West had to follow to two hearts. All that would be required would be a series of unblocking plays.

South started the series by ruffing that club lead with his jack of diamonds. Then he played the ace and noted that East discarded a club. Next came a lead of trump to dummy. West played low and the trick went to dummy's seven. Dummy's last club was ruffed with the queen of trumps and South cashed two hearts.

Then he led his last small diamond toward dummy, finessed the nine after West played small and drew West's last trump with the king while discarding his last high heart to collect three heart tricks and concede two spades at the end.

Ask Andy

Face wrinkles are part of aging process

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Myra Rhinehardt, 15, of Atlanta, Ga., for her question:

WHAT CAUSES THE SKIN OF THE FACE TO WRINKLE?

Skin is that very important surface of our bodies about which we have much concern. We all want to keep it looking good. It is made up of layers of flattened cells, and the outer layer is waterproof. Skin helps to keep our bodies at the proper temperature by handling the important job of evaporating perspiration and by controlling the amount of blood near the body surface.

Our skin, indeed, is important. It helps the body rid itself of wastes and acts as the conductor of such sensations as touch, pain, heat and cold.

The outer skin, called the epidermis, is made up of a number of layers. Outermost is the stratum corneum, made of many closely packed, dead, cornified, greatly flattened cells. These are continuously being cast off from the surface and being replaced from lower layers.

Next layer of the epidermis is the stratum lucdum, made up of layers of closely packed scale-like cells. Third epidermis layer down is the stratum granulosum, made up of cells which are not so flattened and containing a substance called eleidin. Finger and toe nails are considered modifications of this layer. Next layer is the stratum germinativum, where skin pigment is found and replacement cells for the epidermis are made.

The skin's inner layer is called the ermis or corium. This is made up of a network of dense and interlacing fibers of connective tissue. Here's where you'll find a rich supply of blood vessels and hair follicles, glands and nerve endings.

Skin of the face, in most older people, wrinkles as a part of the slow, natural process of aging. It also wrinkles because elderly people have great elasticity of the outer layers of their skin.

The skin's inner layers are fatty and fairly thick while the outer layers are much thinner and more elastic. The outer layers stretch tightly over the muscles of the face. In many older people the elastic outer layer of skin stretches too much and falls into folds or wrinkles. Wrinkles of the face also appear at times with very thin people. With fat taken away from under the skin, the outer layer appears to be loose and it falls into wrinkles.

Wrinkles, for the most part are part of the aging process. Also common as a person gets older is excessively dry, itchy skin caused because the oily, wet covering that helps to minimize loss of moisture from the skin is reduced. Lubricating lotion can help.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Taunya Jones, 13, of Oak Hill, W. Va., for her question:

HOW MANY STARS ARE IN THE MILKY WAY?

That band of hazy light that looks a little like a splash of milk in the night sky is actually a galaxy — a system of stars — that moves through the universe together. Our sun is one of the stars in the Milky Way.

It is estimated there are more than 100 billion stars in the Milky Way. How do you like that for a big number?

It appears to astronomers that from the outside the Milky Way is in the form of a giant pinwheel with five arms. The pinwheel is constantly spinning around in space.

Scientists believe that the Milky Way is more than 100,000 light-years wide.

Plan to revamp schools met with little enthusiasm

Most local superintendents showed little enthusiasm for a suggestion by Illinois Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin that Northwest suburban school officials hire consultants this fall to map out school reorganization.

Cronin said Monday that despite the solid defeat Saturday of Elk Grove Township's unit school district referendum, he still favors creating two or three unit districts out of High School Dist. 214.

Cronin said Northwest suburban officials should rest until fall and then determine the kind of district reorganization needed in the next 5 to 10 years.

"MY REACTION IS basically sour grapes," said Prospect Heights Dist. 23 Supt. Edward Grodsky. He said Cronin is continuing to pursue the unit district idea in this area "because he's lost now in many ways. First, the Elk Grove referendum, and he's got a good chance of losing the bill in the Senate" (that would allow all residents of an area affected by creation of a unit district to vote on it.)

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Supt. Wayne Schaible said he does not foresee his district initiating talks on reorganization.

Referring to a statement by Cronin that most high quality suburban school districts are unit districts but that Chicago is an exception, Schaible said "Cronin said himself that having a unit district doesn't mean people will get a better education."

Mount Prospect Dist. 57 Supt. Earl Sutter also said he did not believe his district would initiate a group study of area reorganization.

Frank Whiteley, superintendent of Palatine Township Dist. 15, said his perception is that voters in Elk Grove Township turned down the unit district because they did not want that particular one, but said he is not sure the whole idea was defeated.

"THERE ARE TWO things that supersede any suggestion by Dr. Cronin. One is whether the boards (of education) are favorable to that kind of plan (to talk about reorganizing) and whether the constituency wants it. I don't know how people feel about it," he said.

River Trails Dist. 26 Supt. John Fridlund agreed a specific unit district had been turned down but said residents might be amenable to other types of reorganization.

"We should be studying consolidation among smaller districts," Fridsaid. He said unit districts should be studied as well because there might be some advantages to them that have not been discussed.

Dist. 26 and Dist. 57 are presently setting up committees to consider the benefits of merging those two districts. Fridlund said those talks might be a starting point for including other districts.

DIST. 214 SUPT. Edward Gilbert said he is always willing to consider anything that might benefit education in this area, but said he feels "strongly that Dist. 214 is not going to take the sole initiative to start this kind of thing.

"If it's an idea whose time has come, there would be an emergence of interest from other points," he said.

"I would have appreciated it if he (Cronin) had made this suggestion when he had the petitions (to form a unit district in Dist. 59) before him," Gilbert said.

"If he had said, 'hey, let's not vote on this one but let's have all the superintendents get together and start considering reorganization' — well, there might have been more response had he made that suggestion at that time, before we went through this long, drawn-out process," he said.

Gilbert said Cronin "has made it pretty clear that he believes strongly that the organizational model for school districts are unit districts." Cronin's experience has been only with unit districts primarily in the east "where they grew up around towns and are very small."

GILBERT SAID A major problem of trying to divide this area into unit districts is that resources are so unevenly divided. Lines would have to be drawn geographically so "no one is at a disadvantage," he said.

Gilbert said "most people would tend to look to the legislature rather than the Illinois Office of Education (Cronin)" for direction on reorganization.

"The body that is most responsible for and gives the most direction to school boards is the legislature. It has within its power, if it treats people fairly, to reorganize everyone just by one bit of legislation. They could call for all unit districts or districts of no more than 5,000 students or whatever," he said.

Rogert Bardwell superintendent for Elk Grove Township Dist. 59, was on vacation this week and could not be reached for comment. Several other area superintendent also could not be reached. Many school districts are on spring vacation this week.

Help take worry out of buying

Home inspectors gain in popularity

by JOE FRANZ

Purchasing a home can make a prospective buyer uneasy, particularly if he is uncertain of the structural and mechanical condition of his new-found dream house.

Just because major flaws in a home may not be revealed in a quick walk-through by a homeowner-to-be doesn't mean that the flaws don't exist.

Too often a buyer finds out too late that the furnace in his new home needs costly repairs, that his roof leaks or his basement floods.

But there is a way to relieve the uncertainty and take some of the guesswork out of buying a home — home inspection services. Several such services have been established in the Chicago area within the last two years.

The inspections can cover anywhere from 120 to 180 items in a home and usually can be done within a few hours.

"When we are hired we inspect virtually every mechanical and structural aspect of a home," said Forrest Brown, president of Home Inspection Consultants of Greater Chicago Inc., River Forest.

Among the features Brown's firm inspects are the roof, floors and floor joists, ground slope, exterior walls, gutters and leaders, screens and storm windows, exterior paint and trim, foundation and basement, garage, insulation and the heating, plumbing and electrical systems.

"After we do the inspection we prepare a report telling what items in the home are deficient, how they're deficient and what can be done to bring them up to an acceptable standard," Brown said.

C. A. Jachinski, president of Home Inspectors Inc., Glen Ellyn, said his firm requires its clients to accompany the inspector as he goes through a home.

"Most of the time a buyer has questions in his mind and it very often is easier to answtr them while the actual inspection is going on," he said. "Sometimes the human part of it can be lost in the report."

Jachinski said he believes the inspections are important because many defects in a home are apparent only to an expert.

"Most people know nothing about a house except whether they like it esthetically," he said. "They don't know anything about the structural and mechanical parts of it. The same goes for maintenance."

Although most homes have at least some defects, Brown said most are without severe problems.

"The problems aren't always that slight, but most of the time they are," he said. "I find a lot of homes just need a good general handyman to correct a few things. Most of the problems are much more readily correctable than most people think."

When a prospective homebuyer requests an inspection, Brown said, they usually make the sale contingent on a favorable report.

"The sale usually is made contingent on everything being reasonably in order," he said. "There is some leeway, most poeple just want to make sure the house isn't going to fall down."

Brown said prospective buyers should be suspicious of sellers who will not allow their homes to be inspected before their sale.

"Most sellers that are hiding something are a little reluctant to submit to an inspection," he said. "But I have a message for them. What they're hiding in many cases isn't as serious a problem as they might think."

Stuart Zwang, general manager of Home Raters Inc., Skokie, said his firm is there to protect the home-buyer. "We're not there to kill the deal. We're there so the people know exactly what they're getting and what condition it's in."

Brown said a home priced from $70,000 and $79,999 that is within 20 air miles of his River Forest office would cost $125 to inspect. Inspections of lower prices or more expensive homes would be correspondingly higher or lower.

Zwang said his firm charges a flat rate of $60 for an inspection, plus travel expenses, from its Skokie office. Jachinski's firm, which also has an office in Rockford, charges a flat rate of $75 to inspect any pre-owned house.

The three businesses inspect new and used homes as well as commercial and industrial buildings.

Officials from all three firms said that while the companies point out deficiencies in homes, they make no attempt to influence the decision of their clients to purchase or not purchase a home.

"I simply point out the good points and the problems," Brown said. "Then it's up to them to make a decision."

Zwang, Brown and Jachinski also said they are not affiliated with real estate firms and are not connected with any contracting firms.

Although home inspection services still are relatively new in the Chicago area, Brown said they are more established and more widely used in some parts of the country.

"Over 90 per cent of the homes in New York City are inspected prior to their exchange," he said. "The service has been in existence longer there and people have grown accustomed to it."

Brown said that while most inspections are performed at the time a home is being sold, he notes that the service can be useful at other times.

"If a homeowner feels that something is wrong and he's uneasy, the inspection can help," he said. "I can clear up their uncertainties and recommend ways to correct any problems, usually at a very minimal cost."

Zwang said in addition to conducting home inspections, his firm is the Chicago agent for the Certified Home Inspection Program, which provides warranty coverage on the major structural and mechanical features of a home.

Under the program, if the inspection uncovers no major problems, the homeowner is given $100 deductible coverage for up to 18 months on the roof, basement, foundation, walls, ceilings, floors and the heating, cooling, plumbing and electrical systems.

Zwang said the cost of the CHIP inspection varies depending on the value of the home, but he said a typical home probably would cost $135 to $140 to inspect. After the inspection, a homeowner has the option of purchasing a warranty for $100 on the items that pass CHIP's inspection.

Favorable interest rates available, but how long?

There is a plentiful supply of low-cost residential and commercial construction financing, but the situation may change if the heavy spring demand for construction funds materializes, reported the Builders' Assn of Chicago.

Ray Wirkus, executive vice president of Miller-Davis Co., said "interest rates are probably more favorable now than they have been in the past or will be in the future. We expect that interest rates will rise and that the rate of inflation will increase this year." Both factors will increase the cost of construction, he said.

Drew Waitely, vice president of Continental Bank, said, "There is plenty of money available for financing of new construction."

A CHECK OF banks and lending institutions show that construction loans currently are 2.5 to 3 points above prime, which stands at 6 per cent. A year ago, the prime rate was 7.25 per cent. A year from now, many analysts are predicting higher rates. Permanent financing is running from 9.5 to 9.75 per cent.

As the economy continues to recover and the demand for long-term credit increases, financing is expected to be harder to obtain and more expensive. A recent U.S. Commerce Dept. survey reported that businesses plan an 11.7 per cent increase in capital spending in 1977 over 1976. A spending survey by a leading trade journal shows that industry is planning to increase its outlays for new plants and equipment this year.

The outlook for increased inflation also will affect the total cost of construction. As construction picks up, there may be inflationary dangers from higher energy prices, the after effects of the severe winter weather, and the bigger federal spending plans for 1977. If inflation seems to be increasing too rapidly, the Federal Reserve Board may tighten up on credit.

Reasonably-priced and plentiful money and the danger of increased inflation are two reasons Chicago construction industry leaders are urging businessmen contemplating expansion and new building programs to begin now.

ARTHUR F. O'NEIL, chairman of the board of W. E. O'Neil Construction Co., said business owners also can profit now from the slack construction market.

"Presently, the competition among contractors is keen, even severe," he said. "From the owner's point of view, this has many advantages."

In a recessionary period, contractors are willing to trim overhead, shave profit margins, and deliver extra services, like sitting down to plan the most cost-efficient plan or calculating alternatives in materials and methods that can mean dollar savings.

Additional factors that can produce cost savings to businessmen are the plentiful supply and reasonable prices of materials; the ample supply of skilled labor, with most tradesmen working under contracts that run through May of 1979; high labor productivity, and favorable tax incentives.

Home mortgage plan gains backing

Legislative proposals to encourage saving toward a mortgage down payment and to make federally-insured graduated payment mortgages widely available would put homeownership in reach of many more Americans — especially young families, said a Washington, D.C., savings and loan official.

John U. Raymond, chairman of the board and president of Home Federal Savings and Loan Assn., told the U.S. Senate Banking Committee recently that a plan to create tax-deferred individual housing accounts "is one of the most powerful incentive I can imagine for thrift and homeownership."

Under the proposal, contained in legislation introduced by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., savers could accumulate up to $10,000 toward a down payment on a home in their IHA accounts. Taxes on the interest in the home was eventually sold.

RAYMOND ALSO endorsed legislation by both Brooke and U.S. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., committee chairman, to extend an existing experimental plan by the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development in which homebuyers may start payments on FHA-insured mortgages at a lower than normal level, then gradually increase the payments for 10 years before leveling off.

Raymond, appearing on behalf of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, said expansion of the program will encourage greater experimentation with alternative mortgage instruments.

"Flexibility in mortgage loans would provide new options which may appeal to a broader segment of the population which is currently unable to enter the housing market because of the monthly payment rigidity found in existing long-term, fixed-rate mortgage contracts," he said.

Green Thumb working for state's elderly

by SAMUEL O. HANCOCK

ELDORADO, ILL. (UPI) — The Illinois Farmers Union Green Thumb, a federally funded senior work program, is casting an eager eye at an abandoned school in Harrisburg.

The brick, wood, windows and pipe in its three stories and an attic represent potential fixup and building project materials for the Green Thumbers. The school district authorized the senior workers to dismantle the building without charge to the district in return for the salvageable materials.

There won't be any headache calls on this project.

"It will be taken down brick by brick," said Jack Horning, Illinois director of the program that currently has 230 workers 55 years of age or older in 24 counties of central and southern Illinois.

"We've never taken down a brick building before, but I'm not concerned," Horning said. "Many of these people are retired small-or tenant-farmers who need to supplement their Social Security payments and if you were a small farmer you had to be a jack-of-all-trades.

"Sometimes I'll ask them at the start of a project if they know how to do it and some will say, 'well, I don't know. I think so.' When they say that it's time to get out of their way because they jump right in."

The Illinois program will be five years old July 1. It had its national origin 11 years ago and now has programs in 28 states, Puerto Rico and Washington, D.C.

The Illinois Green Thumb is operating under a $1 million budget this fiscal year from the U.S. Labor Dept. Horning wants an increase next year to permit expansion of the program to about 55 counties.

Most workers are paid $2.30 an hour and none may work more than 1,300 hours in a year. Foremen get $2.55 an hour.

Some men work at state parks and for towns and villages rebuilding and painting picnic tables and shelters, and maintenance and custodial work.

The senior ladies work in libraries, at senior citizen nutrition programs and drive minibuses to take elderly citizens to see the doctor or dentist or go shopping. A growing number is engaged in an outreach program of assisting the shutins or disabled.

Horning said Susan Brown, a widow, worked at the Flora Nutrition center in the program until she quit when she was 90.

"We have from 160 to 170 applicants on the waiting list and hope to pick up some of them after the start of the next fiscal year."

The Green Thumb headquarters is an abandoned school building in Eldorado that took on a new look after the eager senior workers pitched in.

"You should have seen this place," Horning said. "Children had knocked out all the windows, the lavatories were pulled out and so were all the switches. It's decent now, nothing plush, but it serves as our office and has shop and storage space."

The Green Thumbers also renovated the interior of one of the log cabins at the Saline County Area Museum at Harrisburg to serve as a home for the museum caretaker.

"And we have a winterizing program for the homes of low-income elderly people," Horning said. "If you have an income of $200 a month, you don't have money these days to hire anything repaired."

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

Will Rogers is credited with saying: "I never met a man I didn't like."

Even if we take the comment literally (and, let's face it, it's suspect), then it becomes immediately apparent that Rogers was never a tenant and never a landlord.

Dear Mr. Campbell: As president of the statewide Assn. for the Protection of Tenants here in California, may I bring two facts to your attention as a consequence of a recent column:

(1) Unless it is an emergency or impractical, your landlord should give you reasonable notice of his plans to enter, and enter only during normal business hours. Twenty-four hours is usually considered reasonable notice.

(2) Tenants who find it necessary to secure roommates to help pay rent to gouging landlords — or even reasonable rental rates — should first consider if any other tenants are paying similar rental rates for similar space, i.e., one-bedroom, two-bedroom, etc. If so, it would be discrimination for the landlord to up the rental rate by $25 a month, or even $1, because two single persons were sharing.

Married couples enjoy "dual rates" with no increase in wear-and-tear. Two singles of either sex are usually better housekeepers since there is more to lose if they should become sloppy. Married couples are bound by a "paper contract" to live as is until death do us part.

Let's not forget that about 47 per cent of the population in this state rent and that the No. 1 complaint received by the attorney general's office concern landlord-tenant relations. Gov. Jerry Brown has said that renters are "not in the American tradition of owning a home" — that they are second-class citizens. — R. David Herndon (Hayward, Calif.)

Despite the governor's attitude, I couldn't agree more with your comments about tenants' rights. Unfortunately, moral rights are one thing, and life is quite another.

Dear Mr. Campbell: In a few months I will finish paying off a $2,500 loan. I was told by one of the agents that I would have to pay $20 more to city hall to clear myself of said loan. Is there such a law? I thought after I finished my obligation, plus interest, it was all I needed to clear my debt. Please let me know if this is so. — Mr. A. P. (Philadelphia, Pa.)

Yes, there is such a law, and actually it's a small price to pay for having this debt recorded as being paid. Without it you could — at some time in the future — have the devil's own time trying to sell your house, lot of whatever piece of real estate you pledged as collateral.

Dear Mr. Campbell: My husband and I have been separated for 33 years. Since then I have purchased a house. His name is not on my deed, but I have been told that upon my demise he would be able to get my house.

I contacted a lawyer and told him the facts by telephone. I was told to come to his office for a conference and that the fee was $50. Naturally, I didn't appear. Would you please answer this question for me? — Mrs. V. B. (Hartford, Conn.)

I can answer it only by saying that the $50 you just "saved" yourself could turn out to be the most costly mistake of your life. If you are still legally married to this man, and if you should die without a valid will, then he most certainly would be in line for the house — or a hefty percentage of it (state laws concerning residents who die without a will vary, but a surviving spouse is the prime heir). Please keep that appointment with the lawyer.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I had siding put on my house which cost $4,900 and which went through the bank so the final bill was $8,000 or more. Since I have the cash in the bank should I pay this off and save over $3,000? I am [illegible] years old and retired. — Mr. S. C. (Jenkintown, Pa.)

Yes, if you can possibly afford to pay it off early without dangerously dipping into your reserves, then do it. I suspect that your estimate of a $3,000 savings is just about on the head, and I imagine that you have as many good uses for the money as the bank has.

NI gas plan would aid senior citizens

In an effort to lessen the impact of higher energy costs on fixed or low-income senior citizens and to document the advantages of adequate insulation, Northern Illinois Gas has petitioned the Illinois Commerce Commission for permission to carry out a residential ceiling insulation program at no charge for about 1,000 customers who meet established criteria.

NI-Gas officials said they are initiating the program to underscore their commitment to conservation while helping those who have been most affected by inflation and increased energy costs. Those living on fixed or low incomes have been hardest hit by new higher energy costs and the recent record cold winter which further raised energy bills.

"We know from our ongoing energy conservation programs that adequate ceiling insulation reduces energy consumption. Unfortunately, those in the older, poorly insulated homes, who could benefit most from such conservation efforts, are least able to afford the initial cost," said Larry Davis, of NI Gas.

Eligible participants must be senior citizens (head of household, age 65 or older), on a fixed or low income of no more than $4,600 gross annually from all sources. They must be owners and residents of the single-family homes to be insulated and be NI-Gas space heating customers. NI-Gas' service territory includes much of the northern third of Illinois outside Chicago.

IF THE PROGRAM is approved by the Illinois Commerce Commission, NI-Gas will release further details through newspaper advertising. Its ads will include coupons which should be returned to the company by interested parties. The company will determine if applicants are NI-Gas single family, space heating customers. Qualified persons will be mailed applications requesting additional information.

"The insulation work will be done by contractors participating in the existing NI-Gas ceiling insulation program, with the company paying the entire cost. Information gathered from the program, including gas heating use before and after adding insulation, will be used in planning future NI-Gas conservation programs," Davis added.

Job moves key to home turnover

Job-related moves continue to provide the muscle of Chicago's home buying market.

People who are moved by their companies and people who move because they change jobs or to be closer to their place of employment accounted for 47 per cent of the sales and 45 per cent of the purchases in a survey by a Chicago real estate company.

Baird & Warner Inc. examined 4,925 transactions which took place in 1976 to determine why people sell and buy homes.

AS HAS BEEN the case in similar studies by the company in recent years, the job-related move dominates.

In the case of sellers surveyed, 26 per cent cited "voluntary relocation" as their reason for selling, leading the 1976 list.

Robert G. Walters, senior vice president and general manager of Baird & Warner's residential sales division, said the "voluntary relocation" category includes persons who sold their homes because of a job change which did not involve a company transfer; because their employer moved and they voluntarily followed; or simply to move closer to their employment to cut commuting time.

Job transfers, where people are relocated by their employer, account for 21 per cent of seller responses. These two categories combined totaled 47 per cent of the selling segment.

The same two categories totaled 45 per cent of the reasons for buying. However, job transfers were several percentage points higher than voluntary relocation, reversing the top two positions reported by sellers.

LIQUIDATION WAS cited by 17 per cent of the sellers, the same figure as 1975; "upgrading" noted by 13 per cent of those polled, up from 11 per cent in the earlier survey; and, "retirement" cited by 6 per cent, down from 7 per cent a year before for sellers "moving to apartment" in 1976 was 5 per cent, no change from the prior year; and in the "miscellaneous" category — 12 per cent, an increase from 10 per cent in the '75 period.

Home energy policy urged by savings league

A home energy policy that calls for voluntary conservation efforts, suggests federal incentives to help homeowners carry conservation costs and provides a way for home buyers and mortgage lenders to factor estimated energy costs into the home purchase mechanicsm has been proposed by the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

The league is the principal trade association serving the $400 billion savings and loan business.

Savings associations are the nation's chief suppliers of home mortgage credit.

VOLUNTARY, RATHER than mandatory, energy conservation efforts are at the heart of our proposals, league president John A. Hardin said.

"The economic and family disruptions caused by January's severe weather have helped to convince millions of people that the nation's energy shortage is real — and not contrived," Hardin said. "As that realization spreads, we think the American people will respond to the need for voluntary conservation efforts."

Key to the league's program is the voluntary disclosure to prospective home buyers of an existing home's energy costs.

"Energy costs already have escalated," Hardin said, "and there seems to be little doubt that energy costs will continue to rise. Home-buying families simply must be able to factor a home's energy costs into their budgets."

HARDIN SAID that the League would be working with real estate brokers to devise a simple way to include energy costs in the information typically given to prospective home buyers.

Hardin also called upon mortgage lenders to factor energy cost data into the appraisal and loan underwriting processes.

"We'll be seeing a marketplace judgment based upon a home's energy costs," Hardin said. "It will stand to reason that a well-insulated home will command a higher price than a similar home which might lack adequate insulation, weather stripping and the like."

The league's proposals acknowledged that some home energy improvements could be costly. Consequently, the league urged the federal government to "provide direct income tax credits to homeowners who improve the energy efficiency of their homes and install energy saving equipment or systems."

THE LEAGUE ALSO suggested that savings associations be permitted to make loans for solar or other renewable energy systems beyond the current 15-year, $10,000 statutory limit on home improvement loans.

"We want to encourage American families to upgrade home energy efficiency," Hardin said, "and we want to be able to provide a flexible financing package that can be adapted to each home's peculiar needs."

The league's energy recommendations were first adopted by a specially formed energy committee which met in Washington late last month.

Home for the large family. 4 large bedrooms, 2 full baths, surrounded by rec. fac. Needs landscaping to tie it together. Excellent home & setting for children.

Loyola home plan urges employes to buy in area

The board of trustees of Loyola University of Chicago has approved a fund of $1 million to provide 5-year low-interest loans to Loyola employes to buy homes or condominiums within a six-block radius of its Lake Shore Campus at 6525 N. Sheridan Rd.

The program is called Project-walk-to-work.

"Currently, the walk-to-work loans from Loyola will be made at 6 per cent simple interest for a five-year period with a limit of $8,000 per family," the Rev. Raymond Baumhart president, said. "The funds may be used as the only down payment or in combination with the employe's own funds. A small apartment building may be acquired by an employe, or two or more families may together buy a building and turn each unit into a separately owned condominium," he said.

THOSE ELIGIBLE include all full-time employes who have worked at the Lake Shore Campus or the Lewis Towers Campus for one year or longer, provided they meet the prevailing credit requirements of the mortgager. In the case of the full-time faculty under contract, the one-year employment is waived.

"Taken literally, the walk-to-work concept would hardly apply to the Lewis Towers employes on the Near North Side, but because the CTA bus and "L" transportation to Lewis Towers from the Loyola Avenue station and Sheridan Road buses are so excellent, Lewis Towers employes are invited to participate in the program," Father Baumhart said.

Father Baumhart said the timing is excellent because the Chicago Home Purchase and Rehabilitation Plan of the Community Services and Research Corp. has set aside $7 million in mortgage funds requiring relatively low down payments.

"This plan includes provisions for rehabilitation of older homes and apartment buildings in the East Rogers Park area," Father Baumhart said. "The combination of the plan and the university's fund is powerful indeed, and could benefit Loyola employes as well as the entire area," he said.

Eight lending institutions have expressed an interest in making conventional mortgage loans to Loyola's walk-to-work loan recipients which may be combined with mortgages from these institutions if the employe prefers a conventional mortgage.

Agency tells ways to curb soil erosion

Each year 10,000 acres of land in Cook County and 3,000 acres of land in Lake County are converted from agricultural use to urban use. This provides sites for houses, shopping centers, schools, and highways to meet the needs of the growing population.

These changing acres also are the source of much of the sediment that pollutes streams and rivers, and fills lakes, according to the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. It also reduces the capacity of reservoirs to control flood water.

During construction, when the soil is disturbed, soil erosion is 10 times as great as that on land used for cultivated crops and 200 times greater than on land in grass or pasture.

EFFECTIVE CONTROL at a reasonable cost is possible if certain principles are followed in development.

These principles include using soils that are suited for development, leaving soil surface bare for the shortest time possible, controlling the flow of runoff, trapping sediment on the site and releasing runoff water safely downstream.

Builders and developers can minimize erosion, and sedimentation and other conservation problems by selecting the best site for an intended use. Tracts of land vary in suitability for different uses, so knowing the kind of soil, the topography, and the drainage pattern of the area will help in identifying and evaluating potential problems.

Soil surveys are available from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and include soil maps, soil descriptions and soil interpretations. The interpretations serve to point out the hazards and limitations in using soils for different purposes.

LEAVING THE soil bare for the shortest possible time is the second principle of erosion control. One should grade only those areas going into immediate construction, rather than the entire site and proceed as construction is completed in one area.

If construction is delayed on a cleared site, temporary vegetative cover can be used to protect the site against erosion.

The flow and velocity of runoff can be controlled by mechanical or vegetative measures, according to the service. Sediment basins can trap sediment on the site so that areas downstream are not damaged.

All the principles of erosion and sediment control should be planned as part of the construction operations.

More information on controlling erosion and sediment from construction sites may be obtained from the U. S. Soil Conservation Service office, 560B W. Main St., Lake Zurich.

Home mortgage delinquency rate continues to dip

Home mortgage delinquency rates at the end of 1976 continued the slight downward trend from the record high level posted in mid-1976, according to the latest survey by the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America.

The two consecutive quarterly decreases in the delinquency rate, although small in numbers, are in line with historical patterns during a period of recovery in the economy.

John Wetmore, MBA's chief economist, reports, "With the possible exception of a small, temporary bulge because of high heating bills this winter, delinquency rates should continue to taper off from the peak that came in the wake of the 1974-75 recession."

THE SURVEY showed that the over-all 90-day delinquency rate (which includes all mortgages three or more months in arrears) was 0.55 per cent on Dec. 31, unchanged from the Sept. 30 survey. However, conventional mortgages declined slightly from 0.36 to 0.34 per cent. Loans guaranteed by the Veterans Administration also declined from 0.55 to 0.54 per cent. In contrast, unsubsidized loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration rose from 0.57 to a record high of 0.60 per cent.

Wetmore said the increase in FHA delinquencies was the expecttd result of the many servicing changes imposed by HUD over the past 15 months.

"As we had predicted, the requirement to accept partial payments of FHA mortgages means that overdue loans are now remaining delinquent longer, boosting the FHA delinquency rates in all categories," he said.

The foreclosure rate, which had hit a low of 0.15 per cent in the second quarter, rose again slightly to 0.13 per cent.

Wetmore said although the foreclosure rate edged up slightly in late 1976, the number of owners facing foreclosure proceedings on their homes has dropped steadily during the past four years. In 1973, 0.99 per cent of all single-family mortgages in the survey had foreclosures begun during the year. This declined to 0.94 per cent in 1974, 0.87 per cent in 1975 and 0.69 per cent in 1976 — a 30 per cent drop since 1973.

He attributed the sharp drop in total foreclosures begun in 1975 and 1976 to increases in employment and income, along with a strong recovery in the housing market.

Here's a twist—developer asks advice

Bernard Meltzer

On real estate

As the old saying goes, "There's two sides to every story." Recently I discussed the way a neighborhood should react to a change in zoning. I talked about the political power of a united neighborhood. Today's letter concerns zoning from the developer's standpoint. I believe the two positions illustrate an interesting concept.

Dear. Mr. Meltzer: I could not help but laugh after I read your recent reply to the reader who was concerned with "saving the neighborhood."

I am a real estate developer, and for the past 20 years have been constructing housing developments and garden apartments. In recent years, I have seen neighborhood pressure block many worthwhile projects. If everybody followed your advice, the amount of new building construction in this country would be diminished by approximately 50 per cent.

Since you are so anxious to help the neighbors block proposed developments, perhaps you can give the developers some advice. We spend many hours and make substantial investments in planning new developments. Most of these are very well conceived. Often, we are forced to drop these projects at the last minute after years of work because of a local protest group armed more with insults than with knowledge.

What are the developers to do? — Old Developer.

As a real estate consultant, I have worked many years for developers who have had zoning problems. I think that the following four-step approach is your solution to the problem of hostile neighbors in a zoning hearing.

The first step is to analyze the project as if you were one of the neighbors. Is it honestly good for the neighborhood? If you do not believe this, then you are facing an uphill battle.

Step two is to meet with the neighbors prior to the zoning hearing. Try to straighten out any differences before the hearing. Very often the movement of an access road, the placement of buildings or a change in the number of units will satisfy the neighbors and eliminate any opposition.

The third step is to do your homework for the zoning hearing. Put on as many necessary witnesses as possible. Remember that you are building a record that you may have to use in a future appeal.

Finally, select the right expert witnesses. It is not always the best move to get the senior partner in a prestigious architectural firm. This type of witness becomes rattled when the neighbors begin to criticize him in the meeting. Usually a junior partner or the head of a smaller firm has an easier time identifying with the neighborhood.

Bear in mind that it sometimes takes a good deal of patience to make a good presentation at a neighborhood zoning hearing.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I was so cold this winter that I finally decided to call in a new heating contractor. Two years ago we had a heater installed in our house. The man who did the work claimed he put in the same size heater that he removed. We have been freezing ever since.

The new heating contractor knows our house very well because he installed the original heater. He brought me the old invoice, which shows that the heater which was in the house before was 30 per cent larger than the one we have now. He wants a lot of money to remove this and install a new one.

The man who made the mistake was very reputable, which is why I used him. What do you suggest that I do? — No Heat.

Everybody makes mistakes, even reputable heating contractors. If he is as reputable as you say, he should recognize his mistake and remedy it. I would engage a lawyer and inform him that you are willing to sue if the proper heater is not installed.

Lawsuits are expensive and you may end up compromising the cost of the new heater with the man who made the mistake. Otherwise, have your new contractor install another unit and let your lawyer "do his thing."

Dear. Mr. Meltzer: I am an only child. I am in my early 40s and have never married. Teaching school occupies my entire life and I love it!

Very recently my parents died — actually, two months apart. They lived in the same house in which I was born and grew up. Though there were only three of us until I moved away and got my own apartment, the house has four bedrooms.

I teach in an area about 12 miles from the house, and besides, I wouldn't want to live in anything that large. Naturally, my parents left the house to me. I want to sell it, but I'm completely ignorant when it comes to the world of real estate.

Some friends have advised me to put the house up for auction. They claim I'll do better that way. What is your opinion? A Real Novice.

I feel you would receive a higher price for your house in a private sale negotiated by a broker. He will secure proper financing for you, will assist you in the involved negotiations and technicalities that are a part of every transaction.

An auction sale should be considered for an unusual property, or when legal requirements might indicate its use. But a seller can usually get a better price for a typical house through a private sale.

Dear. Mr. Meltzer: My husband and I moved into a really nice apartment in the center of town. It's in a luxury building and is quite expensive.

Everything is in excellent condition except for the bathroom sink. It has many tiny cracks in the enamel. Aside from the aesthetic sense, the sink looks dirty when it isn't.

Is there anything we can use to overcome this? — Meticulous.

Clean the sink thoroughly. You might even pour a little alcohol over it after cleansing to make sure there is no grease or film left.

Then apply two coats of any epoxy-type enamel. This will hide the cracks and look very good. Remember, it will not shine like new, and it will not last forever. But it will look just fine until it needs doing again.

Palm Beach: playground of the rich

by FREDRICK N. WINSHIP

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Where in the world can you see poodles being driven to their appointments at a pet beauty parlor in chauffeur-driven limousines?

Palm Beach, of course. And the pampered pooches of America's richest resort know their place. They sit in the back seat upright, the better to display their jeweled collars.

Vulgar displays of wealth are not new to this carefully manicured social sandbar where ocean front property sells for $3,000 a foot —, when available. Soon after the Vanderbilts, Whitneys, Gerrys, Cushings, Wanamakers, Goulds and Astros gave the infant resort their imprimatur in the 1890s, the nouveau rich began to register at its grand hotels. Some stayed, built palatial villas and became today's Old Guard.

The continuous mix of old money and new from all over the United States has gradually changed Palm Beach from one of the most snobbish resorts to one of the most democratic. Almost anyone with a fortune and without a criminal record can "make it" socially in Palm Beach, although money alone cannot open the doors of the starchy Everglades and Beach Clubs to newcomers and most of the resort's sizable Jewish colony.

Palm Beach today is essentially a home community made up of wealthy to super rich families who have become residents for reasons of weather and Florida's lack of state income tax. One of its newest residents and boosters is astronaut Edgar D. Mitchell, who established a business here and would like to be mayor someday.

Transient vacationers still stay at hotels, and there are only two that count — the impressive seafront Breakers, a designated National Landmark that is celebrating its 50th anniversary, and the more intimate Colony. But most of the social action goes on in Palm Beach's beautiful houses. Million dollar mansions, in architectural styles ranging from pseudo-Spanish to neo-Regency, separate the real social swells from people content to nest in the rapidly growing number of condominium apartments, which start at $100,000 for a one-bedroom efficiency unit. But Palm Beach houses never seem big enough for the average party, which tends to take the form of a supper dance.

"You really need a tent in the garden," said Mrs. Victor W. Farris, whose husband invented the disposable paper milk container. Mrs. Farris rents brightly striped tents seating up to 300 guests and lit by crystal chandeliers, a preference shared by such top hostesses as Alabama steel heiress Mrs. F. Warrington Gillette, Jr., and cosmetics queen Estee Lauder.

"They're easy to air condition — but we didn't have to worry about that this winter," Mrs. Farris added.

OPEN HOUSE

Right now, people are moving into homes they once thought they couldn't afford. And this special kind of open house will show you how you can too. Come see one of our custom homes before it's all finished. Examine a unique, money-saving concept called the Finish-It-Yourself House™, first hand.

Finishing a custom-built Capp home yourself enables you to save thousands, compared to the cost of having a general contractor build the same house on your lot. You'll see how a homebuyer can custom design his dream home . . . and work step-by-step with Capp in making his dream come true.

Because the house you'll see is unfinished and ready for its owner to complete, you'll get a chance to see Capp custom-built quality close up. At this open house, nothing is hidden. And you'll learn how you can finish your home with materials and instructions we provide.

Yes, it will be a different experience — an eye opener, for sure. And you'll probably walk away saying, "This is how I'll make my dream come true."

Please come. You owe it to yourself.

Palm Beach—where the rich play

Beach's history ended March 19 with the Cancer Ball. The chill, cloudy weather kept tourists away from Worth Avenue's celebrated array of 165 shops and fashion boutiques but did not crimp the social activity. Mort Kaye, the resorts veteran and more or less official photographer, described the staggering succession of private parties and charity balls as "sensational."

"There are balls and dinner dances to benefit every known disease and cultural activity, many of them at the Breakers' spectacular Venetian Ballroom. Palm Beach prides itself on being "the most Philanthropic Community in America," and charity has done more to bring gentiles and Jews together in common enterprise than any other aspect of Palm Beach life.

For $200 or so for the price of a pair of tickets, black tie and a couture gown, and a goodly display of jewels (tiaras are still worn on occasion), any Palm Beach couple can join in the charity fun and get a chance to see some of the celebrated visitors to the resort.

This season they included Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, Henry Ford II, Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward, Ronald Regan, the Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitneys, Oral Roberts, Carol Channing, Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen, Roberta Peters, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Burt Reynolds, Gloria Vanderbilt, Louise Nevelson, Joan Collins, Mayor Teddy Kolleck of Jerusalem, the older brother of the Dalai Lama, and a clutch of U.N. ambassadors.

First nights at the Palm Beach Playhouse and art show openings at the Wally Findlay and Palm Beach gallaries are also chic formal occasions. These events are meticulously recorded in the photo-filled Social Pictorial, one of several Palm Beach publications that have not heard of the death of the newspaper society page.

"We're in a geographic area that is a little short on culture, and I'm trying to do something about it," said Patrick Lannan, a Chicago-born conglomorateur who introduced Palm Beach to modern art before it had even countenanced Picasso. Lannan just added 28 galleries to his home to display one of the world's largest collections of contemporary art to the public, by appointment only.

"Art lovers from all over the world have come to see my collection, which makes Palm Beach an art mecca of sorts," Lannan said.

Nobody knows exactly how many people come to Palm Beach in the winter, but there are about 10,000 residents of which 6,600 are registered voters. A majority of them recently elected a new mayor, Chicago meatpacking heir William Cudahy, to succeed New York stockbroker Earl E. T. Smith, one of whose three wives was a Vanderbilt. Smith retired from the non-paying job after serving six years and spending more than $100,000 of his own money on Palm Beach.

"This is a wonderful community and we try to keep it that way," said Smith, who successfully battled high-rise condominium apartments and other atrocities. Palm Beach has a superb police force and is virtually without crime. It has the most elegant shopping center — Poincian Plaza — in America and another of the same ilk soon will be built by art dealer Findlay at the head of Worth Avenue.

Palm Beach has no mortuaries, cemeteries or hospitals, but all such facilities are available in West Palm Beach across Lake Worth. Right now, the resort actually has only a few dark clouds on its otherwise sunny horizon. Florida's lethal cocoanut palm disease has hit Palm Beach, but trees are being injected with terramycin to slow its advance.

More worrying, however, to most Palm Beachers, is Hustler Magazine's rental of the estate of the late Jock McLean, of the Hope Diamond family, for $10,000 a month as a "weekend retreat." Whatever obscenities were expected have not materialized.

A more chronic headache is the fate of Mar-a-Lago, the 112-room building built by cereal heiress Marjorie Merriweather Post and willed by her to the state of Florida for an official guest house worthy of presidents and prime ministers. Florida does not have funds for upkeep and maintenance and the 17-acre spread may revert to Mrs. Post's heirs, who might possibly want to develop the real estate.

"People are pretty wary about how real estate is developed around here," said Findlay, whose negotiations with the city fathers for approval of his shopping center were protracted.

"But then, nobody wants to see Palm Beach ruined."

Buffalo, N.Y, landmark bought by Illinois firm

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — The Prudential Building, a landmark and one of the foremost works of architect Louis Sullivan, was sold in a mortgage foreclosure recently to a lone bidder for $200,000.

United Founders Life Insurance Co. of Illinois bought the building from Buffalo Holding Corp. of New York City to recover the remainder of about $625,000 on the structure's mortgage.

The 13-story building, constructed in 1895-96 and recently designated a "landmark" by the Buffalo Landmark and Preservation Board, was considered by many architects to be one of the country's first true skyscrapers.

A spokesman for United Founders said the company has "no particular interest in developing the building." No one has yet made an offer to buy the building and some fear it may be demolished if United Founders fails to find a buyer.

Daley's Bridgeport— a neighborhood with pride

by DAVID SMOTHERS

United Press International

The shrine of Bridgeport is a one-story, red-brick bungalow fronted by a flag pole and a lawn not much bigger than a large beach towel.

There are signs saying "No parking by police order" spaced in front of the bungalow. A squad car is at the curb, a yawning policeman inside.

Almost four months after his death Dec. 20, Chicago still keeps watch over the home of Richard J. Daley.

It is no more than appropriate. It was from this door that Daley emerged almost every morning of his 21-year reign as Chicago's mayor. And it has been the unpretentious, almost shabby neighborhood of Bridgeport where he lived all his life that has produced far more than its due share of the men who have run Chicago for practically all of the last half century.

CHICAGO HAS not known a mayor who was not a Bridgeporter since 1933. The current acting mayor Michael Bilandic, is a son of Bridgeport and the odds-on favorite to shed the "acting" part of his title in a special election April 19.

Bridgeporters, or neighbors from adjoining precincts of the 11th Ward, flourish at key levels of power at city hall. Tom Donovan, a somewhat shadowy figure who runs the Chicago Democrats' awesome patronage apparatus, is from these gray streets. An estimated 5,000 of the city's 20,000 patronage workers are from Bridgeport and the rest of the 11th Ward.

Power and clout fairly ooze out of Bridgeport and spread throughout the city. It is much easier to ask why than to explain it.

One big reason was and is Daley and the Bridgeport mayors before him, Ed Kelly and Martin Kennelly. All of them, but Daley most of all by far, protected Bridgeport, favored it, nourished it with patronage and special attentions.

An equally important reason may be that Bridgeport is a unique neighborhood that refuses to change and refuses to die.

AS SUCH, Bridgeport is the political heart of the 11th Ward, which is the bedrock of the Democratic party's suzerainty in Chicago.

"Here, 92 per cent of the people are Catholic and 92 per cent of them vote Democratic," Sidney Feldman, editor of the neighborhood Bridgeport news, said. "Politics is ingrained here."

On the face of it, Bridgeport is not much of a place. A great many Chicagoans would not even know how to get there or get out.

It is a neighborhood of about 75,000 in the heart of the Near South Side, bounded by 39th Street on the south, a railroad viaduct on the east, and the Chicago River on its north and west. Although it is often referred to as an Irish enclave, it is actually a mix of Irish, Germans, Lithuanians, Poles and Italians.

They live in bungalows like Daley's, or in homes 100 or more years old — so old they sit below street level — or in drab flats. Average income doesn't get much above $12,000 a year, if that. Only 2.5 per cent of adult Bridgeporters finish college.

IT IS A neighborhood of corner grocery stores, corner churches, corner taverns where Daley's likeness beams above the bars like an icon, and broken sidewalks.

Walking the few blocks from the heart of Bridgeport, the nondescript intersection of 35th and Halsted streets, to Daley's home at 3530 S. Lowe Ave., one must skirt puddles of standing water on 35th and pass a vacant lot rimmed a yard deep by squashed beer cans.

The white walls of Comiskey Park, home of Daley's beloved Chicago White Sox, looms over the viaduct which separates white Bridgeport from what used to be called Chicago's black belt on the other side.

Most Chicago alleys are paved, but the one behind Daley's home is cindered. The 9th District police station is at one end of Daley's block and two taverns are at the other.

A gang of children play volleyball on Lowe in front of the police station. There are more kids on the sidewalk tossing a football about. Adults stand in front of their homes talking with neighbors.

THERE IS A sense that this is a place where people actually like and care for each other. That feeling can sometimes be hard to find in Chicago.

Michael Flynn is a clinical psychologist, a native of the Canaryville neighborhood next door to Bridgeport, and a priest two blocks down the street at the Nativity of Our Lord Church from which Daley was buried.

"There's a couple of theories why this neighborhood doesn't change," he said. "One of them is that we're our own ghetto. I think a good part of it is that it's a neighborhood where people feel responsible to reach other in some way.

"And also, you have all people who feel a fierce pride in the neighborhood."

Two blocks up 37th Street from Nativity is Schaller's Pump, a bar and restaurant which competes with the 11th Ward Democratic headquarters across the street as the in place to be in Bridgeport. It is run by Jack Schaller, whose brother was a law partner of Daley's.

"IN THIS neighborhood the people don't leave," Schaller said. "They live in the same places where their parents did, maybe where their grandfathers lived. If I know you, maybe maybe our grandfathers knew each other.

"People here won't be pushed out. They want to be buried from the same churches they were baptized in."

Two blocks down Halsted at his desk at the Bridgeport News (it is hard to write about Bridgeport without stressing the sense of nearness along its streets), Feldman shook his head in sadness.

"I think the influence from this neighborhood is (partly) because it has a quality of being something — that you're a stable person, you go to church, you go to school," he said. "There's a real stability.

"A lot of neighborhoods don't have that. They've lost their morals. The sad, sad thing about Chicago is that at one time all neighborhoods were this way."

FLYNN SAID much the same in psychological and political terms:

"Other neighborhoods used to have their pride. People here identify (with politics). You don't have to be behind the organization to identify with the 11th Ward. Anything that has anything to do with the 11th Ward, they have pride.

"It's bigger than that. Most people have other identifications (than their own). It may be the church, it may be the Moose, it may be the school they send their kids to. This gives them a larger identification, a sensitivity that they're part of something bigger than just a family.

"When the 11th Ward delivers the vote, they feel they're a part of it. I think it adds a dimension to their lives. It's something bigger than themselves."

That could be a reason why Bridgeport is so much bigger than itself that the end of its power in Chicago is not yet in sight.

IT IS OLD — almost as old as municipal Chicago — but it stays put. It is secretive and suspicious of strangers, but its families' lives have been intertwined for generations.

It is run down at the heels, strictly lower middle class in the jargon of socio-anthropologists. But Bridgeporters are serenely confident that they and their neighbors are something special.

In this sense, Daley was an archetypical Bridgeporter. As he never wanted to leave it, as he felt comfortable with his neighbors, so he wanted his neighbors around him at City Hall.

It would be an exaggeration to say he did not truly trust anyone who was not from Bridgeport. But sometimes it seemed that way. And the many Bridgeporters still in power are not much different.

The house doctor

Dear House Doctor: The plastic tapes are broken on two folding chairs that we use on an open patio. I can buy new chairs for the price a shop asks for installing new tapes. Can I do this job myself? Mrs. D.W.

I have never hemmed a skirt nor have I ever baked a cake from scratch, but I am sure that repairing these chairs is a much easier job. Even with no previous experience, you should be able to install new tapes on one chair in not much more than one hour.

First, remove all of the tapes as the old ones will be faded, even if still intact. The tapes are usually held by Phillips screws, so you will need the proper type screwdriver to remove them. Save the screws and the washers for re-use.

If any of the tapes are in one piece, you can use them to measure the lengths of the new tapes. If not, use a cloth tape measure and measure the distance across the front of the chair and around the tubing to the screw holes. Add 3½ inches and cut the tape to this measurement. The long vertical tapes are measured in the same manner, around the top of the back, the rod at the back of the seat and around the tube at the front of the seat.

Fold the ends of the tapes as illustrated. Use a pointed instrument to punch a hole three-eighths inch from the point. Insert the screw and washer and fasten this end to the chair. Fold the other end of the tape and stretch it tight. Locale the hole to be punched for the screw and fasten this end.

Some tapes are fastened with metal clips instead of screws. You cannot salvage these clips when you remove the old tape, so be sure you can buy new ones before you start the job. Fortunately, few manufacturers use this method as replacement is more difficult.

New tapes are available at most hardware stores. Packages usually contain either 17 or 72 feet. Most inexpansive chairs will have four tapes in each direction on backs and seats. Two 17-foot packages will be required for each chair.

If you have a better grade chair with five tapes in each direction, the two 17-foot packages will be a wee bit too short. You will need five packages for two chairs, or you can buy the larger package and have some left over for the next job.

Outpatients clinic

G. R. — The moss growing on your roof can be killed by sprinkling with a mixture of three ounces of copper sulphate to a gallon of water. This is very poisonous. Keep it off shrubbery below the eaves.

Mrs. R. N. — Paint the water stains on the acoustical tile ceiling with fresh shellac. Flat interior paint is applied over this.

G. S. — Spread a thin layer of fibered roofing cement over the joints on the inside of the aluminum gutters to stop the rain leaks.

Ceramic tile floor

Dear House Doctor: I will install ceramic tile and a marble threshhold over my bathroom floor now covered with vinyl tile. Is any treatment of the wood floor required before the tile is placed? How is the threshhold installed? W. T.

A wood floor must be completely firm or the tiles will crack. If you have this condition, no treatment of the wood is required. Otherwise, it is necessary to install plywood underlayment and this leads to complications due to the increase in elevation. Use a special mastic such as Miracle Tile Adhesive for both the tile and the threshhold.

Cold walls

Dear House Doctor: Last spring, we removed the wallpaper from our living room and dining room. My husband says the rooms are much colder this winter than in previous winters. I would like to remove the paper from the bedroom walls but we are concerned about the insulation provided by the paper. Mrs. F. K.

Your area had the coldest winter since the Ice Age seven million years ago (or was it 10 million?) and your husband is blaming the absence of wallpaper for the rooms being cooler. You can tell him that the fuel saving provided by the insulating value of wallpaper can be measured with a teaspoon.

Crawl space trouble

Dear House Doctor: The house we live in is very low to the ground. Inside, we have a very musty smell like mildew. Mold forms on shoes in the closets. Can we correct this? Mrs. D.S.

If you have less than 18 inches clearance between the bottoms of the joists and the earth, the condition is hopeless. With greater clearance, you should cover the earth with 4-mil polyethylene plastic sheets which you can buy in long rolls 10 feet wide. Adjacent strips must be overlapped. Avoid spaces around piers and against the skirt walls that would allow dampness to escape from the earth.

Dear House Doctor: There is a swarm of bees in a bush next to my house. I am afraid of being stung when time comes to mow the lawn. Mrs. S.S.

Call a beekeeper in your area. He will be glad to relieve you of the swarm. Without proper protective gear, it would be dangerous for you to try to destroy them.

Garage floor

Dear House Doctor: I have a two-car garage. I cannot keep the concrete floor clean. You once stated in your column that garage floors should not be painted. Do you know of any way to clean the concrete? J. T. H.

The reason that I did not recommend painting a garage floor is that in summer car tires driven over hot pavement become very hot. When this hot rubber is parked on a painted floor, the paint will blister. You can take this risk if you wish, but since dirt penetrates the surface of concrete, scrubbing is never too effective.

A record of success is the Thorsen Realtors' story. The last three offices opened by Thorsen Realtors have become instant successes. In less than one year's time, Thorsen's Bolingbrook and St. Charles offices have become pace setters in these markets. Schaumburg is in the top 25% of brokerage firms of over 100 serving the Northwest Suburban area of Chicagoland.

Our statistics show that the average sales associate's income earned with the company tops $25,000 annually. Licensed salesmen and unlicensed prospective salesmen have an immediate opportunity for instant success in Thorsen Realtors' new Arlington Heights/Mt. Prospect branch office. A few key sales opportunities are still available in Thorsen's Schaumburg/Hoffman Estates office. Management positions are also open in the Northwestern Suburban area offices. The Thorsen management team is dedicated to the success of each and every Thorsen sales associate.

Opportunities await you, so for a confidential interview call Joyce Anderson at Thorsen Realtors' Oak Brook headquarters, 887-5980.

Responsibility.

Around here, that's more than just a word. It's the stuff our business is made of. A bank must be responsible, not only to its customers, but to its community. It must be responsible for the financial well being of its community. By reinvesting in the area, to the tune of $50 million in loans, First Arlington has taken its rightful place as a business leader in Arlington Heights. The bank's new management is aware of its place and has vowed to improve it. Our stated policy is to take on even greater responsibility for the healthy growth of this community. It's a challenge we eagerly accept, as we look forward to an exciting future for Arlington Heights and for the bank.

Far more affluent and attractive Chicago communities have crumbled under the weight or urban blight and pressure.

THE OLD Italian, Bohemian, Jewish, Polish and many other districts are all gone. On the South Side, white communities fight a generally losing battle against the steady shoving of blacks who can't get out of the ghetto by any other means than shoving — with results often as distressing to the blacks as to the whites.

Bridgeport remains, protected by city hall and clinging to its roots.

The roots are grounded in poverty and shared hardship.

The old Bridgeporters, for the most part, came to the neighborhood because the great Chicago stockyards were directly to the south. They worked in the yards and so did their sons, young Dick Daley among them.

Their families lived in the stench of the yards, a noxious blanket that never seemed to lift. When there was no work in the yards, they went hungry. Sometimes they stole. Feldman remembers those days. They were his boyhood.

"OH GOD, they'd steal," he said. "It was almost the natural thing to do. They say things about the black people, that they steal . . . this neighborhood was almost totally Irish when I was there and the Irish would do the same thing. It was a matter of survival.

"The kids used to jump on a truck and throw things off the truck. They'd crawl up on the coal wagons and undermine the coal and then it would fall down on the street and they'd pick up a couple of bushels of coal and take it home because it was cold at home."

It may then be little wonder that the new generation of Bridgeporters finds nothing at all wrong in a system which has given them an edge in the struggle to survive in the city.

Flynn offered the argument that machine politics, Daley-style, actually makes for healthy politics, healthy neighborhoods, healthy cities.

"It is one way that the top is responsible to the bottom," he said. "Your common, ordinary man can't go down to city hall and stink about the system. But through this system the precinct captain who has to face his voters and deliver the voters on election day has to deal for them at City Hall.

"THERE ARE big cities that are in trouble like New York where there's no sense of something like that — that you're a part of a whole big city, you're not just a small part of it . . . where people feel 'now I voted for you, now you do something for us, you're working for us in a sense.' "

Sooner or later in Bridgeport, it all gets back to neighbor Daley. Schaller spoke of him almost in reverence:

"What can you say about a man who was just a wonderful man? He came in here often. He was a soft-spoken man. A shy man. He'd just say 'How are you doing? How are the kids?' And that was it.

"He'd always call everybody by their first name. He might not know your last name but he'd never forget a first one.

"And on Thanksgiving or Christmas he'd send out hundreds of turkeys — 400 to 500 — to families that needed them all over the city. People don't know he did things like that. But he did.

"But was he the boss around here? You'd better believe it. He didn't have to tell you. Does your boss tell you every day? You know he's the boss."

Bull Valley
BEAUTIFUL ESTATE
The rolling countryside of McHenry County's Bull Valley is a natural compliment to this wonderfully rambling 5 bdrm., 3½ bath country home that can trace its heritage to an 1854 colonial farm house. The center of a 10-acre wooded estate, the home's abundance of windows bring the outdoors in . . .the living room with its paneled fireplace & mantel, the master bedroom (with an adjoining study, warmed by a Franklin stove), a separate bed & sitting room suite, a cozy den, the formal dining room, the kitchen next to the sunny morning room. The spaciousness does not end with the house — 4 out buildings (now used as barns, 4-car garage & storage sheds) are readily adaptable to stables & show arena (there are more than 30 miles of bridle trails nearby). The home & its environs offer a wealth of space that can be beautifully tailored to fit a family's specific requirements. $189,000.

Beauty contest for homeowners

In acknowledgment of National Private Property Week April 17-23, Gladstone, Realtors and their eight suburban offices are sponsoring a "Front Yard Beauty Contest" for homeowners.

To enter, homeowners will be asked to submit color photographs of their front yards and home exteriors.

Prizes of gift certificates totaling $1,400 for nursery stock from Charles Klehm & Sons Nursery, Arlington Heights, will be awarded to 24 winners on July 13, the date of the firm's 23rd anniversary. First-, second- and third-place awards will be made from each of the Gladstone offices. All entrants will receive a free mum starter plant when they request the entry blank from their local Gladstone broker.

Offices of the Gladstone organization are located in Westchester, Berkeley, Villa Park, La Grange, Franklin Park, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village and Lombard.

No purchase is necessary to enter the Gladstone contest, nor is it necessary to be a client of the realty firm.

Eye on business

The Walgreen Co. reported record volume during the second quarter of fiscal 1977. Sales for December, January, and February rose 4.7 per cent over the same period last year to $342,992,068. Sales for the first six months of the fiscal year were up 4.2 per cent to $622,334,216.

Second quarter earnings, LIFO adjusted, were $6,174,318 or just over the year ago figure of $6,131,282. For the first six months of the fiscal year LIFO adjusted earnings reached $7,328,511, an increase of 5.9 per cent over the comparable period in 1976.

LIFO adjusted earnings per share for the second quarter ws 93 cents compared to 92 cents in 1976. Fully diluted earnings per share was 84 cents, the same as a year ago. The average number of shares used to compute earnings per share was 6,648,044, compared to 6,643,192 last year.

Turkey takes a springtime touch

Turkey need not be limited to Thanksgiving, but can be served any time of year. A peach and tarragon garnish gives it a springtime flavor. Left-over turkey can be turned into attractive crepes, then accompanied with a salad and baked desserts for a delicious luncheon.

TURKEY TALK

Thaw frozen turkey completely following directions on bag. Store in refrigerator. Preparation time for roasting an unstuffed bird takes about 5 minutes from bag to oven. Insert meat thermometer into thick part of turkey thigh, making sure it does not touch bone. Roast in 325-degree oven, brushing frequently with Parmesan Butter Baste. Turkey is done when internal temperature registers 180 degrees. Approximate roasting time:

6 pounds — 2½ hours
8 pounds — 3 hours
12 pounds — 4 hours
16 pounds — 5 hours
20 pounds — 5¾ hours

Internally basted birds require different times, so follow roasting direction on bag.

PEACHES VINAIGRETTE

1 can (29-ounce) peach halves
¼ cup tarragon vinegar
1 tablespoon tarragon leaves
1 teaspoon chopped pimiento
1 tablespoon chopped green onion

Combine Syrup drained from peaches (about 1¼ cups) with vinegar and tarragon. Bring to boil. Recude heat and simmer 5 minutes. Add pimiento and green onion. Pour over peach halves. Chill, Serve with turkey. Serves approximately 8.

WHEAT GERM ZUCCHINI CAKE

1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
¾ cup cooking oil
½ cup milk
¾ cup vacuum packed wheat germ*
2 cups flour
¼ cup cocoa
3 teaspoon baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
2 cups finely diced zucchini
½ cup semisweet chocolate pieces

*regular or sugar & honey

Beat sugar, eggs, vanilla, oil and milk together. Combine wheat germ with flour, cocoa, baking powder, salt and spices. Stir into egg mixture. Fold in zucchini and chocolate pieces. Turn into greased and floured 9-cup mold. Bake in 350-degree oven 60 to 70 minutes or until pick inserted into center comes out clean. Cool in mold 10 minutes. Invert onto wire rack to cool. Dust with powdered sugar if desired. Makes 1 cake.

TURKEY CREPES

Wheat Germ Crepes
1 pint dairy sour cream
5 teaspoons prepared mustard
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups shredded cooked turkey
1 cup each carrots, broccoli and celery, cut julienne and slightly cooked
1 teaspoon chicken stock base
¼ cup hot water
Dash white pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon mayonnaise

Prepare crepes. Combine 1 cup sour cream with 2 teaspoons mustard and ¼ teaspoon salt. Spread on crepes. Combine turkey and vegetables. Spoon about ½ cup on each crepe. Roll up into cylinder shapes. Combine remaining ingredients with remaining sour cream and mustard. Spoon sauce over crepes. Serve hot or cold. Serves 4.

CREPES: Combine 1¼ cups milk, 2 eggs, ¾ cup flour, ⅓ cup vacuum packed wheat germ, ¼ teaspoon salt and 2 talbespoons melted butter in electric blender. Whir about 20 seconds. Pour ¼ cup batter into hot lightly greased skillet or crepe pan. Tilt quickly to coat bottom. Bake over medium heat until top is dry, about 30 seconds. Turn and bake other side. Repeat. Makes 8 crepes.

NOTE: Roast either a fresh or frozen turkey breast, or use leftover cooked turkey and shred into pieces.

ALPINE DRESSING

1 cup canned fruit cocktail
1 cup yogurt
2 tablespoons blue cheese
½ teaspoon salt

Combine ingredients and chill. Spoon over individual heads of Bibb lettuce. Makes 1½ cups dressing.

WHEAT GERM CUTOUT COOKIES

1 cup butter
¾ cup sugar
1 egg
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1 cup vacuum packed wheat germ*
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ cup flaked coconut
Colored icings, colored sugars (optional)

*regular or sugar & honey

Beat together butter and sugar until fluffy. Beat in egg and vanilla. Stir in wheat germ and salt. Gradually mix in flour combined with baking powder. (Use 2¼ cups flour with sugar & honey wheat germ.) Stir in coconut. Roll out dough on floured surface to 1/8-inch thickness. Cut into desired shapes. Place on lightly greased baking sheets. Bake in 375-degree oven 7 to 8 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool on rack. Decorate as desired. Makes about 4 dozen cookies.

CHOCOLATE VARIATION: Melt 1 ounce unsweetened chocolate and mix with half the dough.

Battering up a better bread dough

Few fragrances are as enticing as that of bread baking in the oven. And few foods are as tasty as crusty homebaked bread, warm and spread with butter.

Unfortunately, the art of bread baking is not often learned easily. Even baking is not often learned easily. Even the best of bakers gets discouraged when her mixing, flouring and kneading efforts yield a flop.

But Jessie Coulter has some tips for the bread baker who would rather roll her own dough than buy store-bought bread. The retired home economist recently shared recipes and advice in a bread-baking demonstration at the Cooperative Extension Service office in Rolling Meadows.

"Bread-baking has changed a great deal," she said, noting that she uses dried yeast instead of compressed and that the flour needs no sifting. Various liquids, can be used including milk, water, potato water and even orange juice. Milk will give the finished loaf a more tender crust than it would get from water.

USUALLY ALL-PURPOSE flour is used. Bread flour, a mixture of hard and soft wheat used by professional bakers, will give the bread a little more body, but is more expensive and difficult to find. To make whole wheat bread, use one-half white and one-half wheat flour in the basic recipe.

The basic white bread recipe uses the following ingredients:

- 2 packages instant mix dry yeast
- ¼ cup granulated sugar
- ¾ cup instant dry milk
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ¼ cup shortening (oil may be used, but it may add a little more liquid and more flour will be needed)
- 2 cups flour (approximately 9 cups will be used in all)

These ingredients should be combined thoroughly in a four-quart bowl. Add three cups of water (105 degrees) and beat with electric mixer for one-half minute at low speed until ingredients are well-combined. Beat at high speed to start development of the gluten, which creates the gas bubbles.

Add two more cups flour and continue beating vigorously. Mrs. Coulter adds as much flour as she can while using the mixer, then continues mixing with a spoon, gradually adding about four and one-half cups flour or until dough begins leaving the side of the bowl.

TURN THE DOUGH out onto a lightly floured surface and knead until dough is satin smooth and little gas bubbles appear under the surface. Use just enough flour to keep it from sticking to the board and use a spatula to keep shaping it. Knead with the palm of the hand, giving the dough a quarter turn each time. If the dough is not kneaded enough, large bubbles and uneven mixture will result. The dough has almost been kneaded sufficiently when it does not stick when dropped on the board.

Place dough in a greased bowl and turn once so that the greased side is up. Put a piece of greased wax paper over the bowl and cover with a towel. Set in a warm place. The internal temperature of the dough should remain at 80-90 degrees. Allow to double in bulk.

To raise the dough quickly, Mrs. Coulter suggests putting the dough in a slow cooker, covered and heated on the low setting, or putting the dough in a low oven along with a bowl of hot water. The oven should be preheated to about 200 degrees, then turned off before the dough and water are placed inside. This will cause it to rise in about 40 minutes.

To determine if the dough has risen sufficiently, put in two fingers and see if they leave an indentation. If they do, the dough is fully risen. Punch down dough and place on board, kneading until all large gas bubbles have disappeared. Do not add any flour. Divide into four equal balls of one pound each, or three balls of one and one-third pound. Cover and let rest about 20 minutes.

THE LOAF CAN be rolled with a pin or by hand. If the dough has been made properly, it will squeak when the gas bubbles are pressed out. When using a rolling pin, roll each ball into an 8x12-inch rectangle. Roll out all bubbles in the outer edge. Beginning with the upper eight-inch edge, roll dough tightly toward you carefully,

Banana Oat Bread

Unusual banana bread

It's true, someone is always taking the joy out of life. But for a cook who is just lifting a fragrant loaf of banana bread out of the oven, everything is perfect at that moment. Set the bread down to cool completely in order to slice well. Then comes the feast — delicious homemade slices with butter or cream cheese — a pleasure for everyone in the house.

Unusual textured breads are featured in the health food departments of stores or at special places where whole grains and such items are sold. These breads can be made at home, too. Banana Oat Bread is made with ordinary ingredients found in any supermarket and contains a wonderful, old-time texture and a fresh banana flavor.

BANANA OAT BREAD

- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 1½ cups mashed ripe bananas (about 5 medium)
- ¼ cup milk
- 1 cup quick or regular oats, uncooked
- ½ cup raisins

In large bowl cream butter with sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs. Mix flour, baking soda, salt and cinnamon. Add to creamed mixture alternately with bananas and milk. Stir in oats and raisins. Turn into greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Bake in 350-degree oven 1 hour, or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes turn out of pan and cool completely. Makes 1 loaf.

Botulism could have been averted

by JEANNE LESEM

The nation's worst outbreak of botulism poisoning could have been prevented if the tainted home-canned peppers blamed for triggering the tragedy had been boiled vigorously for at least 10 minutes before they were used.

Canning experts and health officials say this treatment destroys botulin toxin if it is present. They recommend at least 10 minutes for meat, poultry and every variety of vegetable, except corn and spinach, which require 20 minutes. The food should be transferred from jars to saucepan without even tasting until the boiling has been completed.

Forty-four cases of botulism poisoning have been reported from hot pepper sauce made and served at a popular Mexican restaurant in Pontiac, Mich. Officials expected more to develop. They said incubation for the toxin can cake up to eight days.

TWO BATCHES of sauce were involved. Health officials said the second batch was made with raw peppers, but became contaminated because the cook mixed it in the same bowl as the first. Washing and sterilizing the bowl between batches could have safeguarded the second batch.

Somtimes boiling of home-canned low-acid foods will reveal a spoiled appearance, off odor or color change. This means harmful bacteria are at work, and the tainted food should be disposed of without tasting and in such a way that neither animals nor people can taste it.

State laws generally prohibit the serving of home-canned food in restaurants and institutions, so the odds against similar accidents are high.

In Illinois, food service sanitation rules prohibit a restaurant from serving home-canned food unless it has been inspected and can meet the requirements for food processors. This is unlikely to be the case in a small-scale food operation, a public official says.

Reliable canning directions for home use are available from federal, state and local sources, manufactures of home canning equipment and in some trade cookbooks. Prices range from a few cents for government publications to a few dollars for large books.

SOME OF THE BEST include: "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," Home and Garden Bulletin No. 8, USDA, 45 cents, and "Home Canning of Meat and Poultry," Home and Garden Bulletin No. 106, USDA, 35 cents. Both can be ordered by title and number from Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Make check or money order payable to Superintendent of Documents.

The 29th edition of the "Ball Blue Book" is still available for $1 from the Consumer Products Department, Ball Corp., Muncie, Ind., 47302, and from some retail stores that carry the company's canning and freezing supplies. The 30th edition, which has a larger format including both metric and regular measurements, is scheduled for publication in late May or early June at $2.50.

Kerr Glass Manufacturing Corp. also publishes a canning and freezing booklet, available for $1 from its Consumer Products Division, P.O. Box 97, Sand Springs, Okla. 74063.

Three top-notch guides sold in bookstores are: "Putting Food By" by Ruth Hertzberg, Beatrice Vaughan and Janet Greene (Stephen Greene Press $8.95 cloth, $4.95 paper); "Better Homes and Gardens Home Canning Cook Book" (Meredith $2.95); and "Home Canning, The Last Word" by Louise W. Hamilton, Gerald D. Kuhn and Karen A. Rugh, all of Pennsylvania State University, with the food editors of "Farm Journal" (Countryside Press, distributed by Dolphin Books ($2.95). The latter contions no recipes.

Batter up bread dough

sealing the final seam. Seal the ends.

Place shaped loaf in a greased 8½x2½-inch pan with the seam side down. Brush lightly with oil. Cover with wax paper and allow to raise in a warm place until dough reaches the top of the pan. (about 40 to 50 minutes). Bake near the center of a 375-degree oven for 40 to 50 minutes. When done, the loaf will have shrunken from the sides of the pan and has a hollow sound when tapped on the bottom. Remove from pan, rub a little fat on the top and place on rack to cool.

If the bread is good, it will not be harmed by freezing, Mrs. Coulter said. She slices the loaf before freezing and freezes it in plastic bags.

BATTER BREAD IS a faster recipe for yeast bread. Since it is not kneaded, the texture will be rougher but the taste is just as good.

To make two loaves, combine:
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 cups all-purpose flour (about 6½ cups in all)
- 2¾ cups water (105-110 degrees)
- 2 tablespoons soft shortening
- 2 packages instant mix dry yeast

Mix together on medium speed or by hand. Beat two minutes or until smooth and bubbly. Gradually add as much flour as possible while using mixer. Add remaining flour and mix by hand. Use enough flour to make the batter leave the side of the bowl and follow the spoon. Cover bowl with wax paper and set in a warm place until doubled (about 30 minutes). Meanwhile, grease thoroughly two loaf pans (4½ x 8½ x 2½ inches).

When dough has doubled, stir down batter by beating vigorously. Batter will be thick and somewhat sticky. Spread evenly in the two pans. Each should be about two-thirds full. Let rise until edges of batter reach the top of the pans (about 30 minutes).

Bake 40 to 50 minutes at 375 degrees. Remove from pans. Brush fat over top, if desired. Cook on rack.

SOUR DOUGH BREAD, tht San Francisco specialty with a distinctive taste and fragrance, can be made in Chicagoland, too. Combine the following ingredients for the starter:
- 1¾ cups flour
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 package instant mix dry yeast
- 2½ cups warm water

Beat for two minutes with electric mixer. Cover and let stand at room temperature for four days. Stir down daily.

To make two loaves of Sour Dough Bread, combine:
- 1 cup flour (about 5-6 cups will be used in all)
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 package instant mix dry yeast
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- ½ cup dry milk
- 1 cup water (110-115 degrees)

Add one and one-half cups starter and one cup flour. Beat at high speed. Then knead in the rest of the flour until smooth and elastic. Allow to rise until double in bulk (about one hour). Punch down; divide dough and let rest 15 minutes. Form into loaves; place in two 8½x4½x2½-inch bread pans. Cover; let rise. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes. Remove from oven and from pans. Place on rack to cool.

To re-use starter, add the following ingredients to unused starter:
- 1½ cups lukewarm water
- 1½ teaspoons sugar
- ¾ cup flour

Beat at medium speed for one minute. Cover and let stand until used again. Stir down daily. It may be refrigerated between uses.

Correction

A dinner roll recipe was printed incorrectly in last week's Cook of the Week column. The Herald regrets the error and hopes that no readers were inconvenienced. The correct recipe follows:

ALL-BRAN DINNER ROLLS
- 1 cake yeast (0.6 ounce)
- 1 cup lukewarm water
- 1 cup lard or vegetable shortening
- 3 cups sugar
- 1½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup All-Bran cereal
- 1 cup hot water
- 2 eggs, well-beaten
- 6 cups flour

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water.

Pour hot water over lard, sugar, salt and All-Bran. When cool, add yeast mixture, eggs and flour and beat well. Cover and let rise about 2 hours.

Punch off about 1 rounded tablespoon of dough at a time and place in buttered muffin tins. Let rise again. Bake at 400 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes. (Yield: approximately 42 rolls. Dough will keep in refrigerator up to 2 weeks.)

ROSEMARY KRAFT of Arlington Heights has a knack for turning ordinary foods such as chicken into memorable meals.

Her cooking 'plain but good'

Everyday foods go fancy

"Plain cooking but good cooking" is the way Rosemary Kraft of Arlington Heights describes her culinary style. However, her recipes reflect a knack for combining ingredients that turn ordinary fare such as chicken or steak into something extra-special. All win plaudits for their delicious flavor.

Her favorite chicken dish calls for whole deboned chicken breasts, which are filled with slices of ham, Swiss cheese and frozen broccoli. These are baked in a creamy gravy made with canned soups and topped with mushrooms and slivered almonds.

"It is so easy to prepare, with no last-minute fuss," Rosemary said. "I make it in the morning, pop it into the oven before my guests arrive, and I'm not in the kitchen at all," she remarked.

ALTHOUGH THIS dish is excellent for a ladies' luncheon, Rosemary finds men like it too, so she also prepares it for company. The chicken is tender and moist, and the ingredients' flavors complement each other.

She serves the filled chicken breasts with long grain and wild rice and a slice of jellied cranberry sauce. Hot rolls and a white wine complete the meal, which looks as appetizing as it tastes.

During the summer, Rosemary uses sirloin steak to make shish kebabs, which also calls for green peppers, onions, mushrooms and cherry tomatoes. Her husband, Tom, cooks these on the grill, brushing them with a well-seasoned lemon-butter sauce. "The sauce doesn't change the flavor noticeably, but it does tenderize the meat and keep it and the vegetables moist and juicy," Rosemary remarked. As accompaniments, she suggests rice or corn on the cob and garlic bread.

ONE OF THE family's favorite meals is chili, made from a recipe devised by Rosemary's father, Joe Muhr, who was associated with a family-owned restaurant for more than 40 years. Now retired, he loves to putter in his Elmwood Park kitchen, competing with Rosemary's mother, another good cook. Joe, who is of German descent, insists on using good meat and fresh vegetables. "He starts everything with onions, garlic and margarine," Rosemary chuckled.

So starts his chili, which also calls for coarsely ground chuck, paprika and chili powder, which are combined with pre-soaked kidney beans. Long, slow cooking brings out the flavor, Joe contends. His chili is mildly spicy, which suits the Krafts' two daughters, Rosemarie, 15, and Mary Anne, 14. The family likes their chili in bowls, topped with a slice of cheese and chopped onion. Oyster crackers are an essential accompaniment.

Joe and his wife, Ann, worked out a cole slaw recipe together. Buttermilk is the secret ingredient, giving this creamy slaw a special flavor, while green pepper adds color and texture. This slaw is not as heavy as potato salad, and Rosemary has served it of-

Quick dessert

Everyone, including the cook, will go for this cool dessert combo that can be made quickly. Chill ripe avocados; halve, pit and brush with lemon juice. Fill hollows with a tangy sherbet mixed with chopped toasted walnuts for an interesting crunchy texture. Orange, lime, or pineapple sherbets are fine choices. Top off each serving with a walnut half or a large walnut piece.

Making casserole ahead

A microbiologist who does much of the cooking for his family says he frequently mixes casseroles together the night before, refrigerates them and bakes them when he gets home from work.

This sounds like a good idea for anyone who is busy during the day. Hearty Beef and Vegetable Casserole is one that he says can be made ahead.

It is a nice change from the usual pasta-based dish and much quicker to make then stew. Refrigerated quick corn muffins are the perfect accompaniment. Add spinach salad and fruit cup for a colorful springtime dinner that is easy on the budget.

To turn other recipes into do-ahead main dishes, the microbiologist says the key words are "keep it good and cold or keep it good and hot." The food safety problems come when food is held between 40 degrees and 160 degrees for any length of time. Specifically he suggests:

• Be careful that wooden chopping boards and knives are scrubbed clean. This is especially important when you are cutting raw meat or poultry and vegetables with the same tools.

• As soon as you have mixed the casserole, refrigerate it in the coldest part of your refrigerator (nearest the freezing compartment or where you store milk). Cover the dish tightly.

• Bake the casserole long enough so it is good and hot — to 160 degrees in the center, if you have a meat thermometer. Bubbles around the edges indicate thorough heating, but if the dish doesn't have much liquid, check to make sure the center is hot. Allow extra oven time for chilled foods and about 10 minutes more if you start with a cold oven.

• If you have leftover casserole, it can be frozen for a later meal or covered in the coldest part of the refrigerator for a day or so. Just be sure not to leave the food out on the counter after dinner. Two hours should be the maximum time between taking the baked casserole out of the oven and refrigerating or freezing the leftovers.

HEARTY BEEF AND VEGETABLLE CASSEROLE

- 4 cups thinly sliced potatoes
- 6 carrots, cut in half lengthwise and crosswise
- 10¾ ounces can condensed cream of mushroom soup
- ½ cup milk
- 2 tablespoons catsup
- 1 pound ground beef
- ¼ cup chopped onion
- ¼ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced, or 4-ounce can sliced mushrooms, drained
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Parboil potatoes and carrots in salted water 20 minutes; drain. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Combine soup, milk and catsup. Brown meat and onion; drain. In 2½-quart casserole, alternate layers of vegetables, soup mixture and meat, ending with soup mixture. Saute mushrooms in butter; drain. Place on top of soup mixture. Cover; bake 30 to 35 minutes or until thoroughly heated. Serves 6.

To make ahead, prepare, cover and refrigerate. Bake, covered, 50 to 55 minutes or until thoroughly heated.

Our Total Value objective is to give you a lower total without sacrificing quality, variety or convenience!

*Our Lowest Total Guarantee

After you've made your purchases at Eagle, compare with any other store. If the total amount for the same or comparable items is less at the other store, we'll refund you double the difference. Simply bring us your shopping list and the Eagle receipt, and tell us which store you compared.

Your shopping list and the purchases made at Eagle must constitute what could be considered your "weekly" supermarket needs purchased during your major, weekly shopping trip. Minimum order of $15.00 and 20 items.

ten with grilled food, baked ham and Sloppy Joes.

A past president of Our Lady of the Wayside Women's Club, Rosemary currently serves on the school board and she and her husband are in charge of coordinating activities celebrating that parish's 25th anniversary. Rosemary also is vile president of Sacred Heart of Mary Mother's Club, and plays tennis and bowls in her spare time.

BREAST OF CHICKEN

6 whole chicken breasts, deboned
6 thin slices boiled ham
6 slices Swiss cheese
6 stalks frozen broccoli, thawed
1 can cream of celery soup
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 pound fresh mushrooms, washed and sliced
1 package (4 ounces) slivered almonds

Lay out chicken breasts and place a slice of ham, Swiss cheeese and a stalk of broccoli on each. Fold over breast and secure with toothpicks. Place into a deep roasting pan.

Combine the soups and pour over chicken. Top with mushrooms and almonds. bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 2 hours. Serves 6.

SIRLOIN STEAK SHISH KEBABS

1 large sirloin steak, cut in 2-inch squares
½ pound fresh, whole mushrooms, sauteed lightly
1 jar small whole onions
2 green peppers, cut in 1-inch squares
1 small basket cherry tomatoes

Alternate meat and vegetables on 4 to 6 long skewers, beginning and ending with the green pepper. Prepare the following sauce:

½ cup butter
½ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon garlic salt
½ teaspoon ground thyme
¼ teaspoon pepper

Heat all ingredients together in a saucepan.

Grill shish kabobs over gray coals, about 15 minutes for medium-rare, brushing constantly with sauce.

CHILI

1 pound dry kidney beans
1 tablespoon salt
4 tablespoons margarine
4 medium-size onions, chopped
1 clove garlic, pressed or minced
2 pounds coarsely ground chuck
1 tablespoon paprika
1 tablespoon chili powder
2 teaspoons salt

Soak kidney beans overnight in 2 quarts water. The next day, bring beans to a boil in the same water, adding 1 tablespoon salt. Cook beans, partially covered, until tender, about 1 hour.

While beans are cooking, saute onions and garlic in margarine until onions are glassy. Add meat, paprika, chili powder and remaining salt and cook 1 hour. If this mixture gets too dry, add juice from the beans. Then add meat mixture to bean mixture and cook 1 hour longer, partially iovered. Adjust seasonings to taste. Ladle into soup bowls. This may be served with a slice of American cheese and chopped raw onion on top, if desired. Serves 12.

Cole Slaw Salad

1 medium head cabbage, shredded
1 medium green pepper, shredded
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons corn oil
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
½ pint mayonnaise
½ cup buttermilk

Combine cabbage and green pepper. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Let stand 2 hours in refrigerator before serving.

Vegetables color salads

Peas and carrots make a colorful duo. Besides being a side dish for entrees, peas and carrots add a bright, tasty touch to ordinary spring salads.

DOWN HOME SALAD

2 cups macaroni shells
1 can (16 ounce) peas and carrots, drained
8 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
1/8 teaspoon garlic
¼ teaspoon onion salt
1 teaspoon parsley
Oil and vinegar dressing

Cook macaroni as package directs. Drain and cool. Combine macaroni, peas and carrots, bacon, eggs, garlic, onion salt and parsley. Chill. Toss with oil and vinegar dressing. Serves 4 to 6.

GOURMET SALAD

1 small cauliflower, cut into flowerettes
1 bunch fresh spinach
½ small head raw cabbage
1 can (16 ounce) peas and carrots, drained
¼ pound bean sprouts
½ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
¼ teaspoon salt
Season with pepper
Oil and vinegar dressing

Cook cauliflower in boiling water 7 minutes. Drain and chill. Shred spinach and cabbage. Toss with cauliflower and remaining ingredients. Serves 4 to 6.

KARNES' HAPPY BIRTHDAY INVENTORY CLEARANCE

Just like your children when they get to a certain age, you politely invite them out to make a living on their own; some of our pianos, organs, guitars, amps and other "family members" have overstayed their welcome.
Also, just like those same children, we're anxious that the new homes they find are happy ones.
Perhaps yours is a home that has always yearned for the blessings that making music on a fine piano or organ can bring.
Then this sale is for you.

Some of these offers are ridiculous, we know. But shopping should be fun, and at KARNES, fun is all we sell.
Surprise your husband, wife, or children with a new piano or organ.

Ethnic eating adventures

Flip-Flop Pot Pie with Italian overtones and Shrimp Foo Young are not a world apart as their heritage might imply. With many persons traveling to all parts of the globe and willing to try foods from other countries, these dishes are right in line with today's eating moods.

The pot pie is a quickie version of an upside-down cake with wavy macaroni and little meatballs making it an entree rather than a dessert. Meanwhile, a home version of shrimp foo young includes water chestnuts, mushrooms and bean sprouts all turned out in a very special Chinese-inspired omelet.

FLIP-FLOP POT PIE

¼ cup chopped onions
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 package (10 ounces) mixed vegetables, cooked and drained
Dash minced garlic
1 can (15 ounces) wavy macaroni and little meat balls in tomato sauce
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
Dash onion powder
2 cups biscuit mix
2/3 cup water

Saute onions in butter. Add cooked, drained vegetables, minced garlic and macaroni and meat balls. Stir. Divide mixture into four greased individual oven-proof casseroles. Add cheese and onion powder to biscuit mix. Stir water into biscuit mixtrue gently with fork. Spoon approximately 3 tablespoons of biscuit mixture on top of each casserole.

Bake in preheated 400-degree oven for 20 minutes. Flip out onto plates for servings or serve in baking dishes. Serves 4.

SHRIMP FOO YOONG

4 eggs
1 stalk celery, cut up
4 water chestnuts, halved
3 mushrooms, halved
3 scallions, cut up
¼ cup cooked shrimp
¼ cup bean sprouts
¼ teaspoon salt
Corn oil, for frying

Put eggs into blender, then add celery, water chestnuts, mushrooms, scallions, shrimp, bean sprouts and salt. Turn blender to high speed. Run a few seconds, turning blender off when no large pieces remain. Pour just enough corn oil into skillet to cover bottom. Heat about 2 minutes. Pour in about ¼ cup batter. Cook, turning once, until lightly browned on both sides. Drain on absorbent paper. Continue until all batter is used, adding corn oil as needed. Makes about 8 (5-inch) omelets.

Seafood and sauce for guests

Shrimp continues to be America's most popular seafood and here are a couple of value tips to keep them in your budget.

Try using the smaller all-purpose size frozen, cooked shrimp in some of your favorite recipes. They add more "stretch" to your cooking. Also, they often are sweeter and more tender than the oversized cocktail giants we think of when we think shrimp. The second value tip is to watch for some of the cooked, frozen shrimp specials that stores will be offering later this summer.

Some tips in using frozen, cooked shrimp — look for shrimp that are frozen separately and not clumped. A smooth ice glaze projects the delicately flavored shrimp whatever the size. Thawed shrimp are safe at room temperature for up to 4 hours — ideal for cold buffet serving.

The following recipes are for two hot dishes that can be served from midday to midnight. They require minimum "hot stove" time and both can be made with the smaller, more economical all-purpose shrimp sizes.

SHRIMP IN CHEESE AND WINE SAUCE

6 slices day old bread, trimmed and cubed.
2 6-ounce packages all-purpose frozen, cooked shrimp
1/3 pound cheddar cheese sliced
1/3 stick butter melted
3 eggs
1¾ cups milk
Pinch dry mustard
Salt and pepper to taste
Cayenne pepper to taste
Cooking sherry to taste

Beat eggs, milk, mustard, cayenne pepper, salt and pepper and sherry in a bowl. Make layers of the bread cubes, cheese and shrimp in a casserole and pour beaten mixture over it. Pop into a preheated 350-degree oven for 40 minutes. It also can be made the day before and held in the refrigerator overnight for final cooking.

Frying crisp chicken

For extra crisp fried chicken, try dipping the pieces in buttermilk, evaported milk or a slightly beaten egg mixed with ¼ cup milk before coating with seasoned flour. Let the chicken stand for a half hour until the coating dries thoroughly; then sprinkle the moist spots with more flour before frying.

Views changing on sealed records

by JEANNE LESEN

Cracks are appearing in the double standard that hampers thousands of Americans searching for their heritage.

One occurred recently when the Child Welfare League of America revised its standards on the controversial issue of sealed adoption records and original birth certificates. It reaffirmed its support of confidentiality for parents who wish it. At the same time, the league recognized other genetic parents' desire to waive their right to privacy and set the stage for reunions with the adults they surrendered as infants or children. It asks adoption agencies to comply in such cases if legislative or judicial action permits.

Only three states currently allow adult adoptees access to such information. But at least 10 state legislatures now are considering proposals that would make it easier for people like Robbie Robinson of Los Angeles to find his real mother and a Missouri mother named Jean to locate the daughter whom she was forced to surrender for adoption in 1951.

Scotland has had an open records law since 1930. A similar law that Great Britain's Parliament passed for England and Wales in 1975 became effective a year later. It has met with mixed reactions.

Many agency social workers say its retroactivity clause is unfair to mothers who gave their children for adoption with the unofficial promise that their anonymity would be protected.

MANY ADOPTEES, including some Americans questioned by UPI, object to its requirement of psychological counseling before information is made available.

The absence of open records didn't stop Carol Cornwell of Wayzata, Minn., and Mary Jo Rillera of Sausalito, Calif., from finding their real mothers and achieving happy reunions.

Mrs. Cornwell was helped in her search by her adoptive mother, a college alumni association and a voter registrar. Mrs. Rillera's real parents, who live in Phoenix, now help others in similar searches.

Not all end happily. A young doctor in Rochester, N.Y., who found his father rejected him as "shallow, self-centered . . . an 18-carat phony."

Nor do all adult adoptees want to search. Mrs. Harriet Bandel of New York City volunteered to help her 22-year-old adopted son look for his real parents. He wasn't interested.

As recently as 1968 the league had reaffirmed its standards supporting sealed records. A spokesman told UPI that growing openness in American society and a nationwide survey of adoption agencies the league made last year led to the policy revision.

AMONG OTHER THINGS, the study found 37 per cent of the genetic parents queried wanted help in locating or identifying their children. Thirty-one per cent gave the agencies permission to pass on their names and means for searching if their children ever wanted to make contact.

Asked to evaluate 128 reunions they had helped accomplish, the agencies rated 87 per cent as successful, meaning all parties were glad they had met. Two each were reported mixed or unsuccessful, and nine were rated "don't know."

In the 1,472 requests from genetic parents in 1975 covered by the study, more than half wanted only non-identifying information about the children they had given up.

One commonplace request, for medical and genetic information, should be easier to obtain in the future. League standards now urge agencies to give adoptive parents in writing at the time of adoption all such information that is non-identifying.

It also recommends on-going communication on those subjects, with adoption agencies acting as go-betweens for genetic and adoptive parents.

IN PHOENIX, Mrs. Helen Leech, Mrs. Rillera's mother, thinks adult adoptees need these facts, ". . . and not just for medical reasons, but for reasons of incest. Working with adoptees, this seems to be a real fear."

Adoption authorities say that danger is remote, but it has happened occasionally.

Orphans, children reared illegally by relatives and children of divorce sometimes search for their real parents. Society understands and commends them. But many social workers, social welfare agencies and even members of the medical profession have tended to regard searching as evidence of adoptees' emotional problems. They say the truth could harm adoptees if it revealed a heritage of mental problems, incest or rape.

Psychologist William F. Reynolds of Williston, N.Y., disagrees. At the two-year point in his on-going research, he said he has found no evidence that searching " is symptomatic of a malady. This traditional way of looking at things is naive. An awful lot (of searchers) say they had wonderful childhoods.

"Searching appears to develop with age. Some never thought too much about it until they had children of their own.

"I'M FINDING so far not much difference between those who search and those who don't.

"This highlights the feeling that adoptees are singled out for discrimination," Reynolds said. "A child of divorce can (search), but an adoptee can't."

He is among those who expect Alex Haley's book, "Roots," and the television series based on it to have tremendous impact on open record laws.

"It's a normal, natural thing (to want to know your heritage)."

Researchers say many who oppose open records are anxious and fearful that their adoptive children will regard them as merely caretakers or long-term baby sitters.

One natural mother who tried to trace her daughter through an anonymous newspaper ad said it brought encouragement and villification, but no useful information.

ONE WOMAN told her, "If you really love that baby, back off. Let her be happy and not know you and don't make her parents' world come to an end by seeing or hearing from you. Stay out of their lives."

The mother said of a social worker at an adoption agency: ". . . she acted like I was someone real dirty and she wanted to get rid of me as soon as she could."

Such opinions apparently are widely held. "Yet, we find few people who are willing to stand up in public and say they are strongly against open records," said Gloria Chevers, director of standards for the Child Welfare League.

Adoption records proposals introduced so far this year in state legislatures include one that would give adoptees over 18 their parents' ages, religion, medical histories, hobbies and other interests, even the reason for their surrender to adoption — but not the parents' identities.

Another would protect the anonymity of genetic parents but disclose medical and social histories to adopting parents.

A THIRD WOULD require biological parents in future adoptions to file their names and addresses with the state social services department to be available to their children from the age of 18.

In California, a statewide task force is studying the sealed records issue following the governor's veto last year of a bill that would have given the state Department of Health authority to arrange

Adoptive parents can understand if children want to find 'roots'

by BILLIE BACHHUBER

Growing up adopted, did Marge Mount feel rejected, unloved by natural parents, lacking roots? Was she searching for lost love when she decided to look for her natural parents years ago?

Marge answers a firm "No."

"Your real parents are those who love you and take care of you."

Mrs. Mount, of Mount Prospect, who was adopted at three months, is natural mother of three, grandmother of seven. She recalls her own childhood with fond memories, and with gratitude to her enlightened adoptive parents now deceased.

"They were wonderful! My friends loved to come to our home. My parents made no secret of my adoption."

Marge does admit, however, to curiosity about her natural parents as she was growing up.

"I FELT A LACK of identifiable ancestry, but it didn't bother me too much," she recalled.

Mrs. Mount thinks she may have met her natural mother when she was about 15.

"A strange woman came to our door selling tawdry jewelry. My mother bought some, and I remember I was surprised because she usually didn't do that. After the woman left, my mother asked me if I would like to have a brother. I replied, 'Not particularly!' "

Her mother then explained the saleswoman had asked if they had room at their house for a little boy.

"I think she may have been my natural mother, and that little boy my brother."

At age 18, Mrs. Mount, with help and support from her adoptive parents, traced her biological parentage at the hall of records in Chicago. Her initial curiosity satisfied, she ended her search there.

"I FOUND out I was the seventh child of poor parents, and that I had been given up for adoption. I have no regrets about finding my roots. I was perfectly happy with my adoptive parents." Marge said she subsequently sought legal advice in case she should be approached by a relative someday.

"Later a man telephoned saying he was my brother, and asked to see me. As I was advised, I suggested we meet at my lawyer's office. I never heard from him again."

Linda and Wayne Siem of Des Plaines, adoptive parents of three young children, are as candid and honest with their children as were Marge Mount's parents.

"The kids know they are adopted. It's no big deal! We don't think of them as adopted; they're just our kids," said Linda.

The children's friends know they are adopted, too, and except for asking an occasional question, cause no problems, she added.

ADOPTING A BABY girl, now a year old, presented the perfect opportunity for the Siems to share adoption procedures with their sons, 4 and 7.

"We went over the process of adoption with them, explaining how the parents just couldn't take care of her, and we wanted her. We took them to adoption court with us, and wondered just how much had sunk in."

The Siems learned the value of this practical experience about a week after Christmas.

"The boys were playing with the nativity set. We heard them saying for Joseph and Mary, 'Let's go to court and adopt Baby Jesus. He's going to come to live with us for ever and ever!' "

Should their children express any desire to search out their natural parents, Linda and Wayne plan to meet all questions squarely as they come up.

AND IF WHEN they are older, maybe 18, and want to find their roots, the Siems will give their children any information they themselves have.

"For their mothers' sakes because they have put all this behind them, I hope the children won't have this need to know, but I wouldn't stop them if that's what they want. I know I would want to know myself," said Linda.

Medical history through three generations, composition of family, educational backgrounds, physical descriptions, nationality and abilities and talents of both her little girl's natural parents are some facts with which she was provided when she adopted her daughter, said one Northwest suburban woman who prefers anonymity.

"If my daughter becomes interested in her roots, I would do everything I could to help. I don't think we could have produced such a superior baby. She doesn't have the health liabilities we might have given her," the adoptive mother said of the child's natural parentage.

SHE DOES worry that her ilttle girl might someday feel an original rejection, and wishes she herself had given birth to the child.

Now in elementary school, the daughter expressed the wish she had been born in her "mommy's tummy." "That's how I am going to have my four children," she tells her mother.

Tina and Tracy Martin of Mount Prospect plan to provide their infant daughter with any facts they have if and when she should ask about her biological background . . . with one reservation.

"We are willing to share any information we have with our daughter if that's what she wants, and to help her find her natural mother when she's 18 if that's her wish, but only with the natural mother's approval. Otherwise, it would be an invasion of the mother's privacy," Tina explained.

"SARAH IS LOVED so much, we hope she will be looking out of curiosity if she does search, and not for love," Tina added.

The Martins, the Siems, and the mother of the grade school youngster agree that social agencies provide more services and protection for both adoptive and natural parents, and for the child than are available by adopting through independent sources.

Those seeking to be reunited with their biological relatives — parents looking for children, children for parents — has reached an all-time high, according to Mrs. Peggy Magee, social worker with Adoptions Information Service (AIS) a non-profit composite of 12 voluntary agencies working together with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

"It's overwhelming!" Mrs. Magee described the deluge of inquiries.

THREE AGENCIES in that composite — Lutheran Child and Family Services, Chicago Child Care Society and Catholic Charities — now are asking pregnant mothers participating in their counseling services if they would be willing to be identified as natural parents should their child start searching for roots in 18 or 20 years, reported Mrs. Magee.

"But, who knows, maybe in 20

Once man's shaving mug a sort of status symbol

Grace Carolyn

Collecting

To get in the proper mood for today's column, try to imagine a barber shop of about 75 years ago — all shiny nickel plate, white marble and black leather covered chairs which rose jerkily to the proper height by means of a pedal operated by the barber's foot.

In my childhood (no, not quite 75 years ago, but in our small country towns, things didn't change quickly) girls got their Buster Brown haircuts at the barber shop along with the boys and men. Still, we were alien, for the barber shop was one of the last bastions of male prerogative. But there were no "beauty shops," and so I was sent periodically to town clutching 25 cents for a haircut. I remember that the clipper hummed bee-tickles on my neck, and I got a generous sprinkling of "Attar of Roses" talc, plus an all-day sucker.

DURING POST-CIVIL WAR reconstruction and the years when millions of Europeans immigrated to the United States the American barbershop played a dominant part in the development of America and in the grooming of the male populace. It also created a sort of competitive spirit among its patrons for individually-owned, handsomely decorated and personalized shaving mugs which came into vogue.

By the 1870s men customarily got their daily shaves at the local barbershop, a strictly man's domain in those days, where the latest news, politics, sports and gossip were exchanged. Early barber supply firms, recognizing the great numbers of men seeking shaves and in keeping with new sanitation laws, kept catalogs available for ordering specialized individual mugs to hold the shaving soap. These were stored for their owners on shelves.

AT FIRST MUGS were decorated with a variety of floral motifs, then designs representing the owners' trades or business, or fraternal affiliations. Some pictured men at work, some had "secret society" emblems, labor union signs, political preferences, ethnic society designs and others. A barbershop cabinet or shelves of these hand-painted mugs was rather like a city directory. One could order a personalized mug, even to having a photograph "burnt into the side of the mug to last forever," as advertised during the 1800s.

The name "Koken" is synonymous with barber chairs, for E. E. Koken of St. Louis, Mo., invented the hydraulic lift chair mechanism which so intrigued me. Later he started in the business of decorating shaving mugs. The Koken Co. employed men china painters to decorate mugs until 1924, and 8 to 12 men were kept busy in the decorating department, each painting an average of 10 to 12 mugs daily.

THERE ARE MANY collectors of these interesting old shaving mugs today. Foremost among them is Robert Blake Powell, a Texas author-collector who has written "Antique Shaving Mugs of the United States," the first authoritative book on the subject. He is currently compiling a second book, an encyclopedic picture book with individual photographs of about 2400 occupational and fraternal mugs. His first book shows, besides hand-painted china mugs, many others made of various materials, including silver, pewter and even gold-plated with milk glass inserts. Most are from about three to three and a half inches in height. Some of the mugs have additional features, such as brush holders, separate soap containers and matching razors. The first book mentioned sells for $17.95 and may be ordered directly from the author, Box 833, Hurst, Tex. 76053. It is also available at many libraries.

I am indebted to Mr. Powell for extensive material contained in his recent column in Tri State Trader antique newspaper, and for the picture which shows a mug with a painting "The Storm" with two horses and a bolt of lightning, plus the owner's name. The second mug shows two hunting dogs belonging to one Roy Ballard.

If you have questions on this subject, you may write Mr. Powell, who welcomes letters concerning shaving mugs which can be sold or which could be photographed and the pictures included in his new book. He would, of course, appreciate a self-addressed stamped envelope.

"LET'S HANG IT THERE," suggests Georgia Landt as she and Karol Johann make preparations for a "Blooming Ideas Housewalk" through six homes, sponsored by Elk Grove Village Junior Woman's Club. The tour is Sunday, April 24, 1 to 5 p.m., featuring unusual renovations, expansion, design or decorating ideas. A boutique of crafts, house plants, baked goods and cookbook compiled by the Juniors are included. Tickets are $2 from Lynne Frost, 593-5767; also will be sold at the Municipal Building starting at 12:30 on tour day. Visitors should be prepared to remove their shoes. "No children" is request.

Lawrence E. Lamb

The doctor says

Chest pains make her behave like invalid

For the past four to five years I have been troubled by heart poundings and palpitations, chest heaviness and sometimes chest pain under my front lower ribs, after exercising or after emotional or physical stress. I have consulted and have confidence in our two internists. They have done electrocardiograms while I was resting and after exercise, given a stress test, done blood work, tried Isordil on a temporary basis and have declared me a healthy middleaged woman.

I'm 51 years old, 5 feet 8 and weigh 148 pounds. My blood pressure is 110 over 70. I had a complete hysterectomy in 1969. My parents are living, aged 78. My grandparents died of heart disease in their 80s.

Exercise is a part of our family. We swim year round, play tennis, walk and I ride a bike. Our habits are moderate and we do not smoke or do a thing in excess. We have la dolce vita.

Why then do these feelings persist? When it happens, I try to ease off the exercise for a day or two and then do feel better. I also get some relief by taking two aspirin or a Valium at night when the palpatations interfere with sleep. They are getting worse and I am beginning to treat myself like an invalid and have almost stopped participating in these sports which I love.

My husband also has the same symptoms and he, too, has checked out in perfect health. What to do? Is there something we may be doing to cause this? Are we overdoing the exercise department? I would be grateful for your help.

With the good evaluation you describe it is unlikely that there is anything seriously wrong with your heart. Palpitations and even certain forms of chest discomfort with the palpitations can occur in people who have no heart disease at all. Nevertheless, the sensations you describe are discomforting to say the least and they are real.

Exercise seldom produces such symptoms in healthy people except in people who really are overdoing it beyond the level of their physical fitness. We could take an office worker and have him do too much exercise too soon and he could develop such symptoms. He could accomplish the same level of fitness without symptoms if he progresses at a slower rate, taking months instead of weeks to get in shape.

Coffee and other drinks containing caffeine may be a factor. Since you don't smoke you can forget about cigarets as a cause. Digestive disorders can trigger such attacks in some people. You need to be sure you don't have a hiatal hernia (hernia of part of the stomach through the diaphragm) and make some effort to correct any digestive disorders you may have such as spastic colon with trapping of gas. A good diet including adequate amounts of cereal bulk should help in that department.

Anxiety and nervousness can contribute to such attacks. A tranquilizer in these instances may help. Regular vigorous exercise may be associated with a slight decrease in potassium content which may be your problem. This can be important. To prevent this, an 8-ounce glass of orange juice a day will keep your potassium levels up.

To give you more information on palpitations I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-12, Heart Irregularities, Skipped Beats, Tachycardias. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Write to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Charcoal granules easily reactivated

Dear Dorothy: After I heard that activated charcoal granules or kitty granules could be used to absorb cigaret and other household odors, I had quite a time finding activated charcoal. Salespeople said they never heard of using activated charcoal granules for odors. I am now curious as to whether these can be reused, or do you have to constantly use the fresh product?—Mrs. Robert Urban

Too many salespeople, unhappily, are poorly briefed. They should be told that all refrigerator people use activated charcoal regularly to absorb odors. I don't know whether kitty granules can be reused, but they're so cheap it wouldn't be too burdensome to buy fresh supplies. I've renewed activated charcoal. I just put the smelly granules in a bag on the porch in the sun. Two days later, the granules smelled fresh again. I'm "sold" on the stuff.

Dear Dorothy: May I offer a suggestion to the reader who couldn't get rid of the line when she let down the cuffs on her coat? With braids in such vogue, she can put either a half-inch or three-fourths inch matching braid on the soiled line and then perhaps another row about an inch above. She can also use the same trim on pocket flaps or collar. The lining should be turned back and stitched securely so the braid will cover that line, too.—Leila Adler

Dear Dorothy: This tip may be of help to householders who are plagued with the problem of dusting indoor louvered shutters and doors. A very soft-bristled four-inch paintbrush works beautifully. It takes little time and does a great job even in the nasty corners. It would probably also work on Venetian blinds, though I have none. Needless to say, don't use it for painting first!—Mrs. Jane Yates

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

'Bronzed' angel a beauty

Judy Harper

Traditional crafts

Many people who are interested in crafts are so organized and future-oriented that, early in the year, they begin to plan and construct Christmas projects, whether for gifts, decorations or bazaar donations.

The illustrated "bronzed" papier-mache angel is a good idea for these craftspeople — and also for those who enjoy a thing of beauty year 'round, regardless of the season.

This angel, about 24 inches tall, was intended as a Christmas hearth ornament, to be displayed among holly and candles (not too close, of course), but it's so beautiful that it has become a permanent decorative accessory, minus the holly.

IF YOU'VE ALREADY tried your hand at papier-mache figure draping, you probably already have your favorite method of construction. If you haven't, this one is quite simple:

Begin with a cardboard tube from wrapping paper, paper towels, etc., in the height your figure is to be. Glue the tube standing upright to a small board, which serves as a base.

Then wad newspapers into an egg shape, properly proportioned for the head, and tape to the tube. Remember that the human figure is seven heads tall, including the head.

Next, attach wire arms, and then pad the body and arms into proper shape with wads of newspaper and masking tape. Add cardboard wings if desired.

NOW COVER THE entire figure with about two layers of small, torn newspaper squares (each about one and one-half inch square) dipped into thinned white glue or wheat paste.

When this is thoroughly dry, drape and dress the figure as you like, perhaps constructing a whole Nativity scene. (I use torn sheets dipped into wheat paste and squeezed out.)

Hair is made with household string, dipped into glue, and may be styled any way you wish.

The finish on this piece is what is so beautiful and unusual; when properly and carefully done. it looks like bronze sculpture. To finish, proceed as follows:

When the entire figure is thoroughly dry, seal it with two coats of gesso. Then coat with acrylic paint mixed to the exact color of a brown paper bag. This is achieved with raw sienna, burnt umber and white paint.

LET IT DRY completely, and then coat every inch of the figure with tacky glue thinned slightly with water.

I use my fingers for this step and a stiff paint brush to get into crevices. The coating should be fairly heavy.

When this has dried overnight, you are ready to "burn" the figure in preparation for bronzing.

Using a dripless candle, move the flame constantly over the entire figure, coating it completely and heavily with black soot. The glue should bubble and blister a bit here and there.

Now polish off the soot with a soft cotton cloth, rubbing gently but firmly.

When this is completed, rub a bit of gold metallic wax over the high points and rough spots on the papier-mache. Do the edges of the wings, hair, etc., using your index finger. Now it should look very much like old bronze.

Imagine the Three Kings done in this manner!

Attitude toward sealed records changing

meetings between adoptees and natural parents seeking reunions. Gov. Edmund J. Brown Jr. said the bill bypassed protection for all parties, ignored the rights of adoptive parents, would disrupt family relationships and have a chilling effect on adoptions.

To Florence Fisher, founder of the New York-based Adoptees' Liberty Movement Association, only completely open records would be acceptable.

Like many other adult adoptees, she insists genetic parents have no right to anonymity if their adult children wish otherwise.

A more moderate approach is favored by Mrs. Bandel, a founder of the Adopted Parents Committee, a private organization in New York State, and its legal counsel, Aaron Britvan, a Long Islander and adoptive father.

MRS. BANDEL says adult adoptees are entitled to the details of their birth and adoption, ". . . but not at the expense of their biological parents."

Both she and Britvan suggest an agency to cross-match names of adult adoptees and parents actively seeking each other.

Britvan urges adoptive parents to satisfy their minor children's natural curiosity about their heritage by answering questions honestly and simply, but without volunteering information. He favors preliminary counseling for adult searchers before they are allowed to use a name-matching service. Britvan said totally open records denying anonymity to natural parents could lead to greater abandonment of unwanted children.

In New York Stte, attorney Cyril C. Means Jr., a specialist in constitutional law and a professor at New York Law School, is preparing a class action suit on behalf of ALMA, the nationwide organization Ms. Fisher founded in 1971 following a successful search for her parents.

MEANS SAID the suit will ask that New York's state law on sealed records for adult adoptees be declared unconstitutional and an infringement on adoptees' rights. He said the suit would not seek a similar right for natural parents:

"They were adults, at least in the eyes of the law, at the time of the adoption."

(United Press International)

Adoptive parents understand child's need to find 'roots'

years all such records may be wide open anyway," suggested Ann Abrams, supervisor of the maternity department at Catholic Charities.

Getting adoption records open is what Donna Cullom of Evanston was aiming for when she founded Yesterday's Children, an organization which helps adoptees search for their biological parents, in 1974.

Mrs. Cullom did find her natural family and was able to resolve some very real problems she encountered as an adoptee, one, obtaining a passport.

Other adoptees have been denied scholarships, security clearances and have suffered because of lack of medical information. Mrs. Cullom thinks in time adopted children might keep their original names and simply add their adopted names.

Frank's creativity 'Weekend' guide

REUVEN FRANK

Reuven Frank, the man who first teamed Huntley with Brinkley and who reigned for five years as president of NBC News, doesn't have to be the top banana to feel good about what he's doing.

He's a candid, easy-going television pro who has a "high-standards" attitude toward television that there should be more of. He'd rather be taking what he calls programming gambles, working on the grassroots level and creating instead of bearing a big title that brings with it mostly paper work.

Creating is just what Frank is doing as executive producer of NBC's successful monthly magazine, "Weekend," which will become a weekly one hour offering beginning January, 1978.

The show is one of NBC's rare jewels mainly because of Frank's persistence (and news-wise) which helped to launch nightly network news in the 1950's.

One of the reasons "Weekend" has worked is because it has not attempted to imitate the granddaddy of television news magazines, "60 Minutes" on CBS.

" 'Sixty-Minutes' relies heavily on the interview and uses the interview as its main vehicle. We prefer to use pictures and interpretive methods to tell our stories," said Frank, a 27-year veteran of NBC. "Ours is one program that you can't just listen to because it is so visual."

Much to his own and the network's surprise, Frank said, "Weekend" has become a very popular program in its strange 10:30 p.m. time slot the first Saturday of every month. The 90-minute program averages seven million viewers and many of them are, demographically speaking, young and well educated.

"I thought the show would do alright when it first started in May of 1974, but no one expected it to catch on like it did, especially in that time period," he said. The show has not only reaped a steadily growing audience since its inception but was also honored with the coveted Peabody Award last year.

One of the keys to that kind of success was Frank's insistence that Lloyd Dobyns be the show's anchor. The network would have rather seen "Tomorrow" show host Tom Snyder in the position.

"I wanted Dobyns because he's a good writer and I have always believed that good writing is the basic element to any good news show," Frank said.

"Dobyns writes the script after we give him the pictures, just like we used to do it 25 years ago when I first started in this business," he said.

Frank's appreciation for good copy and his own fine writing talents are products of his early years in news. He was a reporter and night city editor at the Newark (New Jersey) Evening News before he joined NBC news as a writer in 1950.

He began his experimentation with weekly, half-hour news forms in 1954, starting with "Background," followed by "Outlook" and ending with the "Chet Huntley Reporting."

He was organizing coverage of the 1956 national political conventions when he teamed Chet Huntley and David Brinkley for the first time. Frank produced "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" from 1956 to 1962, a show which has left its mark on the world with the words "Good night, David. Good night, Chet."

"Those closing remarks were never really planned. We just needed a way to end the broadcast, so I came up with it on the spur of the moment. Huntley and Brinkley didn't really like it," Frank said.

Frank also has produced award winning documentaries in the early 1960s that included "The Tunnel" which chronicled a group of West Berlin students who burrowed 450 feet into East Berlin and rescued 59 men, women and children.

Frank admits that the television documentary has since lost its influence and audience because of its pretentious nature.

"They aren't interesting anymore and they have lost their novelty. Maybe it's because television news magazines are taking over the job that once belonged to documentaries," he said. "I believe that you must do a piece for curiosity sake and not just because the topic is important.

But, "Weekend" has certainly had its fair share of important, if not exclusive, stories. It was the first to focus on American activities of the Korean CIA.

The program has also tackled such hard-core reporting on such topics as the "Moon children" and financial dealings of the religious sect founded by Rev. Sun Myung Moon of Korea and the similarities between Portugal and Pre-Castro Cuba. The May 7 broadcast will deal with one of television's first serious studies of incest.

The way Frank sees it, he's paid his dues in the television industry. He's taken gambles on what would go over with television audiences and won. He's earned the right to work on projects he enjoys most, and he does enjoy producing "Weekend."

Whether faithful fans will continue to support the program in its new weekly time slot, 5 p.m. on Sundays, next year and will tolerate the few minor changes that will be made in the show, including a second anchor to assist Dobyns with the extra load, is uncertain.

"But I think it's an exciting gamble. You can't predict how human beings will respond. But, that's healthy. It makes us work harder and it makes us try new things. And that's good," Frank said.

HIGHLIGHTS:

- NBC presents "A Day With President Carter at 7 p.m. on Channel 5 which will give viewers a look at the President's working style, operations and business during an average working day.
- The second two-hours of the "The Amazing Howard Hughes" continues at 8 p.m. on Channel 2.
- The top ten television shows for last week really took on a new twist. ABC lost its first place ratings to CBS's "Something for Joey" special. NBC's second three hours of "Jesus of Nazareth" took second place. The remaining eight shows in the top ten of the week ending April 10 were: 3—"Lavernt and Shirley," 4—"Happy Days," 5—"Three's Company," 6—"Bugs Bunny Easter Special" 7—"It's the Easter Beagle, Charlie Brown," 8—"Little House on The Prairie," 9—"Barney Miller" and 10—"People's Command Performance."

Keep Carpets Looking Newer Longer

DuPONT ZEPEL CARPET PROTECTOR

How ZEPEL Carpet Protector Works. DuPont ZEPEL forms an invisible shield on the carpet which keeps dirt from lodging itself within the carpet fibers. Even mud doesn't seep in, and dries on the surface. Since dirt tends to settle on the top of the carpet, it can be easily vacuumed away. Less soil clings to the ZEPEL treated carpet, so your carpet won't need its first shampoo until much later than unprotected carpet.

STEP NICELY

Step into a lifestyle of luxury with this vibrant plush fabric. Heat set nylon fibers densely tufted, results in a carpet with startling durability and its ZEPEL soil and stain resistant protective finish is your assurance of top performance years from now. Manufacturer's suggested retail price on carpet is $18.95 Sq. Yd.

Our Special Sale Price $13.95 Sq. Yd.

WORKMEN PUT the finishing touches on the refurbished H. P. Hood milk bottle that for years was a landmark in Taunton, Mass. Now the 40-foot-tall bottle will have its new home at Boston's Congress Street wharf. It will be transported by barge to its new residence.

40-foot tall milk bottle the 'cream' of Americana

BOSTON (UPI) — Yesterday's gimmick is today's Americana.

A bit of eye-startling architecture will be installed Wednesday at the site of the new Children's Museum on Congress Street Wharf. It's a 40-foot high milk bottle.

The four-story replica of the early glass milk bottle was built in the 1930s by Archie Gagnon in Taunton, Mass. It served as an ice cream stand for travelers who were just beginning to make Sunday drives in their roadsters a national pastime.

"THE IDEA THEN was anything to catch the eye of the motorists, to draw them into a place," said architect Richard Gutman, 27, of Dover, Mass.

The bottle is an example of one of Gutman's pet interests — the Coney Island School of Architecture, named after the huge structures at Coney Island amusement park in New York.

"It's a kind of a tongue-in-cheek thing for a type of architecture," Gutman said. "The general reaction is, 'Oh my God, this stuff is horrible.' But it's interesting.

"In many cases, it's one man's monument to himself."

THE ROADSIDE stand in Taunton closed in 1967. Last spring, when the bottle was to be torn down, a Connecticut woman bought it and an architect for the Boston Redevelopment Authority became interested in it.

"She (the buyer) thought it was fantastic and was worth preserving but didn't know where to put it," said John H. Sloan, BRA director of urban design. Sloan first suggested the bottle be used at City Hall Plaza, then for the newly developed waterfront area.

"The City Hall Plaza Committee said no. And the waterfront area didn't want to draw any more people," Sloan said. "I just got very discouraged with the thing. No one seemed to want it."

Then the Children's Museum, with a new building adjoining the Museum of Transportation, said it wanted the bottle.

H. P. HOOD, a Boston-based milk company, agreed to spend more than $80,000 to move the bottle, paint it white with a cream mark on top and the word "Hood" in seven-foot red letters and restore it for use as an ice cream stand.

Sloan said it doesn't matter if the bottle is outrageous.

"There's a lot of stuff that was considered tacky at one point or another. It's a bit of history. It expresses an age," he said.

Gutman agrees, saying yesterday's eyesore is tomorrow's antique and the future's archeological find.

"Given the pace of today's life and how rapidly things change over, if you didn't preserve a few of these ordinary, mundane objects, they would disappear from memory," he said.

Economist Galbraith to speak at Harper College

John Kenneth Galbraith, noted economist and author of the current best seller, "The Age of Uncertainty," will speak at Harper College at 8 p.m. Thursday, April 21, in the College Center of Building A. Galbraith's topic will be "Industrial Society: The Modern Image."

Tickets are now on sale in the College Student Activities Office, Building A, Room 336, of the college at Algonquin and Roselle roads, for $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students. Harper students and staff will be admitted free with identification cards.

Galbraith served as U.S. Ambassador to India during the Kennedy administration. He also served as a director of the U.S. Strategic Bombing Survey. He was awarded the Medal of Freedom by President Harry S Truman.

Galbraith is a former editor of "Fortune" magazine and has written numerous books and technical articles covering agricultural economics, price policy and economic organization. He currently serves as professor of economics emeritus at Harvard University.

Rhodesia's Brown Berets

Jungle fighters 'best in the bush'

CAMP WAFA WAFA, Rhodesia (UPI) — "It's the hardest thing I've ever done," gasped Travis Tucker, a U.S. marine veteran of Vietnam. "Much worse than I expected."

Tucker, 27, formerly of Arlington, Va., was talking about the 100-mile march to and from the top of the Zambezi valley escarpment as part of the training of volunteers in one of Rhodesia's elite jungle-fighting units.

Allied with the heat to make every mile an ordeal were 50 pounds of rocks in every trainee's knapsack and, from the instructors, a steady stream of abuse.

THOSE WHO SURVIVE the march — and other tests of endurance which are included in the training exercises — win the right to wear a brown beret bearing a golden osprey, a bird that observes its prey at length before plunging for the kill. It is the emblem of the Selous Scouts and currently is being worn by two other Americans, one an officer and the other an enlisted man.

Tucker served with the Marines two years in Vietnam. He has lived in Rhodesia five years and when he got his call-up papers (two-year residents are liable for service), he elected to join the Scouts.

"The Marines were the best at storming beaches and that sort of conventional warfare, but these guys are the best when it comes to the bush," he said.

"If you sent 10 Marines into the Zambezi Valley against 10 Selous Scouts, you'd end up with 10 dead Marines."

THE SCOUT UNIT — named after Frederic Courteney Selous, a 19th Century hunter — was created in 1974 when the army decided it needed a corps of bush trackers to fight guerrillas infiltrating in increasing numbers.

The unit has become the most exacting in the armed forces. The most controversial, too.

Until recently the Scouts operated under a veil of secrecy.

Maj. Ron Reid-Daily, founder and commander, says this was intended to protect the unit's black members, who outnumber their white comrades four to one.

"HE IS THE MOST valuable soldier we've got," says the major, adding that if a black Scout home on leave is identified to guerrillas as a Selous Scout, "he's had it, he's finished."

The mystery surrounding the Scouts gave rise to blood-curdling legends of gore and bravado. And these gave way to accusations of foul play.

Since Dec. 11 Roman Catholic missionaries have been killed in terror attacks, and black nationalist leaders say black Selous Scouts masquerading as insurgents committed the crimes to discredit the guerrilla movement.

"We have rolled back the curtain because we don't like these allegations," said Reid-Daily.

REPORTERS WERE allowed to spend four days with the Scouts recently. This did nothing to disprove the allegations, but it provided an unprecedented glimpse into the workings of a highly trained, highly motivated unit whose chief task is tracking.

Tucker, who is divorced and has a 5-year-old son living with his grandfather in the United States, was among 20 men left of the 80 volunteers who embarked on the Selous Scout selection course two weeks earlier.

At any time during the course, the men can quit and get on the first bus out of camp Wafa Wafa, which, in the Shona tribal language, means "You're dead, you're dead."

Tucker came close to giving up on the next-to-last day of the march, an instructor recalled. The instructor told him they would be sorry to lose him but the choice was his.

"AFTER THAT," the instructor said, "he got his second wind and just kept going."

The emphasis during training is on bush survival. The instructors tell the recruits they can't die of thirst or hunger while in the bush except through ignorance.

Before going out on a march recruits are fed rubbery baboon flesh and meat so rotten it is green.

"There is absolutely nothing wrong with rotten meat, even if it's crawling with maggots, providing you cook it first and eat it while it's hot," asserts Sgt. Maj. Anthony White.

THE IDEA IS that if a trooper runs across a lion kill, he can make a meal of the remains — hyena style.

But the bush also provides delicacies. With a few swift slits, White butchered a recently killed kudu, a buck.

Bloody chunks of liver were passed around and eaten — raw. For the recruits, who are given one-sixth of the rations considered necessary to sustain an ordinary soldier, the sweet, fine-grained meat was a gastronomical treat.

The kudu's head was covered in leaves, packed in mud, baked in a hole in the ground, and six hours later every part of it was eaten save the skull.

To wash it all down, White removed a handful of grass from the kudu's stomach and squeezed out a pale green liquid.

"THERE'S AT LEAST a gallon of that in that stomach, and it's perfectly harmless to drink," he said.

The men were then shown how to turn the stomach into a water container and make string from the sinew in the meat.

When there are no kudus around to be killed, the bark of a baobab tree provides a perfectly drinkable liquid.

The knowledge imparted to recruits is drawn from every tribe in Rhodesia.

Copter doc flies treatment to patients in three states

HARBORCREEK, Pa. (UPI) — For a modern version of the old time general practitioner traveling his rural area in a one-horse buggy, try Dr. John G. Hipps.

He pilots a helicopter to visit his patients in a tri-state area. He has become known as the "copter doc."

"I am one of the few American physicians — if not the only American physician — who uses a helicopter in his practice," said Hipps, 52.

GENERAL PRACTICING Associates, Inc. founded by Hipps two years ago, serves a 50-mile radius embracing communities in Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio. In addition to Hipps, GPA, a primary medical service group, includes three physician's assistants, two lab technicians, a psycho-therapist and 13 clerks.

"The idea behind forming the group was to lighten the load at the main office and bring medical service closer to the people," Hipps said. "Many people in these rural areas won't go very far for medical care. We found that unless they could easily get help, they would just suffer with their ailments."

Hipps last June set up a satellite office in Albion, Pa., 40 miles from here. Within the end of the year, he plans to open two similar offices in Wattsburg and Waterford, Pa.

The helicopter, an Engstrom F28, "makes it feasible to get between places quickly on a regular basis," said Hipps, who has only recently learned to pilot the aircraft. The helicopter will not be used to transport patients, he said.

ONCE THE OTHER offices are opened, Hipps said he will install a visual communication system that will allow him to directly supervise cases from both Harborcreek and the helicopter.

Even with only the main and Albion offices in operation, Hipps estimates the program now sees an average of 1,000 patients a week. Both offices have laboratories and x-ray equipment.

"The physician's assistants have a big part in the program," the doctor said. The physician's assistant profession began about 10 years ago when doctors began to utilize the experience of military paramedics. But it was only a couple of years ago when the program became widely accepted that he considered hiring some assistants.

"The physician's assistants can do about 80 per cent of what I do," said Hipps, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School.

"THEY SEE PEOPLE for all types of physical examinations and acute complaints, ranging from colds to abdominal and chest pains to fractures that don't require setting. The assistants do not operate or deliver babies but they do stitch lacerations.

"It's also important to note that while the assistants can go a long way in diagnosing and prescribing treatment, the final responsibility for the patient still lies with me as the doctor."

After graduating from medical school and earning an M.A. in public health and a Ph.D. in science from the University of Pittsburgh, the doctor practiced industrial medicine — first in Pittsburgh and then in Erie, Pa. But Hipps said he always longed to have a suburban-rural practice.

"I come from Curwensville, a small town in central Pennsylvania, and am basically a small town person."

Since Hipps began his practice in Harborcreek 15 years ago, he has continually been trying to improve the medical service available to his patients.

"It's always been my ambition to have this kind of practice," Hipps said. "This is a realization of a lifelong dream."

Young lawmaker trying to oust Sabonjian

by ROBERT MACKAY

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (UPI) — A 20-year incumbent mayor, often called the Richard J. Daley of Waukegan, and a young, ambitious state senator will oppose each other Tuesday in what may be the tightest mayoral race in Illinois this year.

State Sen. Bill Morris, 31, D-Waukegan, says his opponent is head of a Republican "machine" that intimidates and harasses. Mayor Robert V. Sabonjian, 61, says Morris is "a liar," "crazy" and can't find his way around in Springfield.

Morris, elected to the Illinois Senate in 1974, admits he would like to run for governor or some other top state office in the future. He is running for mayor now "because Mayor Sabonjian chose to run for reelection. This is a very good city, but the last eight to 10 years of the present mayor — he's really lost touch with the people."

MORRIS SAID Waukegan, about 45 miles north of Chicago, has a large deficit, a high crime rate and its population is declining. Sabonjian denies the charges.

"But he's got a good machine," Morris said of the mayor. "There are a lot of businessmen who want to be for me but are afraid. It's worse than Chicago in some ways politically because Mayor Daley . . . at least was somewaht flexible on issues. Mayor Sabonjian on the other hand will not back off.

"If you're against him on an issue, you're against him forever and you're going to pay a price."

get their ward's sidewalks fixed.

"HE'S A CHARMING individual but he's a very tough politician," he said.

Sabonjian, a former Democrat, said he is "flattered" when people compare him to the late mayor of Chicago because "he (Daley) loved his city and I think we have a lot in common there. I love Waukegan."

But he bristles when asked if he runs a political machine.

"I have run (for mayor) three terms as a Democrat and two terms as a Republican," Sabonjian said. "It's more than machine politics. It's affection by the people. It's the people who go in that voting booth and can vote anyway they want. No one is in there forcing them to vote for Sabonjian."

SABONJIAN said Morris' charges that he intimidates businessmen "are outright lies. He (Morris) has written off the downtown revitalization program. Businessmen are afraid of him. He is a liar."

Sabonjian, well known for his hard-nosed stance toward rioters in the mid 1960s and his firing of 57 striking policemen in 1970, said he is proud of his controversial decisions.

"That's the kind of mayor people want," he said. "This city needs strong leadership. Morris can't do that. He's been fooling around, playing games with the Crazy Eight. Waukegan doesn't need a crazy mayor."

Morris is a leader of the state Senate's so-called Crazy Eight, a group of independent Democrats who formed a bloc to resist the domination in the legislature of the Daley machine.

SABONJIAN SAID Morris has been "ineffective" as a senator for the last two years, only getting four of the bills he sponsored passed. "I don't think he knows his way to the washroom in the Senate building," Sabonjian said. "All he does is talk. Morris is a master at playing with words, but not a master of doing."

Although each man predicts victory, Morris says the outcome will be decided by 500 to 1,000 votes; not a very big margin in a city of 67,500 persons.
